Meeting Linked To Laval Talks; Spaniards Expect Gibraltar Attack

The War Today

ADOLF HITLER and Nazi military chiefs meet Spain's Gen. Franco in conferences believed foreshadowing at least passive Spanish war aid against Britain; meeting linked to Hitler-Laval talks as sign of impending Mediterranean action.

SWISS REPORTS say France may grant Germany and Italy important African bases and protect them with remnants of her fleet, in exchange for permission to return capital to Paris; agreement would replace expiring temporary armistice of last June.

ROYAL AIR FORCE bombers have smashed Nazi invasion plans in six weeks of assaults on jump-off ports, and have cut German industrial production 20 per cent, British claim.

Berlin, Oct. 23.—Barely 24 hours after his conference with French Vice Premier Pierre Laval "somewhere in France" Adolf Hitler today met Generalissimo Franco, head of the Spanish state, on the Hispano-French border.

Present at this first meeting of Hitler and the man he helped make Spain's dictator were an imposing list of German military leaders, German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop and Ramon Serrano Suner, Franco's brother-in-law, who was made foreign minister recently after his return from conferences in Rome and Berlin.

The German military chiefs included General Field Marshals Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the high command, and Walther von Brauchitsch, army commander in chief. Franco is his own military commander in chief.

Also present, said D. N. B., official German news agency, was the Reich press chief, Dr. Otto Dietrich (and, according to the United Press, Dr. Friedrich Gaus, chief of the German foreign office juridical staff and Hit-

French Reported Giving Nazis Bases in North and West Africa

While Vichy Is Believed to Have Balked At Handing Over Fleet, It Assertedly Will Defend Ports Occupied by Germans

By Charles S. Foltz, Jr.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bern, Switzerland, (Thursday) Oct. 24.—A proposed new French-German agreement, giving the Axis powers air and naval bases in all France and the French Empire but not handing over the French fleet or involving the French in war against Britain, was reported tonight to be in the hands of the Petain government at Vichy.

Reports from Vichy indicated Marshal Petain himself may go to Paris soon to sign the agreement, which also would extend the frontier of the unoccupied zone north to the Seine.

This would give the Vichy regime a part of Paris—ostensibly for the purpose of returning the seat of government there. Paris straddles the river.

[Presumably the Germans would continue occupation of the coastal strip on the English Channel and Bay of Biscay.]

Naval bases which would fall to the Axis would include those at Dakar, capital of French West Africa; Toulon, on the Mediterranean coast of France; Casablanca, in French Morocco, and Bizerte, in Tunisia.

The air bases would include those in both North Africa and Syria—strategically located for a possible drive against Egypt and the Near East. The French navy's job would be to defend those bases against attack by the British—as it did at Dakar.

[Some reports indicated Spain may grant the Axis bases in the Balaeric Islands in the Mediterranean, and the Canary Islands, off

Nazi Invasion Setup Crushed, British Claim

Smashing Air Victory On 2,000-Mile Front Officially Described

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 23.—A great victory in a six-week aerial counteroffensive that smashed a full-dress German attempt at invasion was claimed officially by the British today and put down as one more historic defense of these islands.

Through its new service, the air ministry told the story—how British bombers had doggedly ridden the air over a 2,000-mile Nazi front, alternately attacking and observing, until the German invasion fleet had been dispersed at last and German invasion springboards had been wrecked from Narvik, Norway, to Bordeaux, far toy the south in France.

It was the first such sweeping success yet claimed against the peril that long has lain across the Channel, and it was accompanied by these other declarations intended to show that the Royal Air Force was developing quietly into an instrument of destiny for Britain:

A claim, also made by the air ministry, that a fifth of all the Nazis' productive capacity for war had been affected by British bombs, which night upon night have fallen from the far interior of Germany to the German-held French coastline.

The statement of Capt. Harold Balfour, the air undersecretary, that the position acnieved by the air arm, however unspectacular it might seem, was "one of the great victories of the war."

Despite the restrained exultance of the air ministry's narrative of the broken attempt at invasion, official sources reiterated the customary British warning:

"The threat persists and will persist as long as (German) naval units,

Italians Get U. S. Protest On Bombings

Seriousness of State Department's View Stressed by Berle

The United States formally protested to Italy yesterday against the bombing last Saturday of American oil properties in neutral Saudi Arabia.

Every effort was made by the State Department to underscore the seriousness with which it viewed Italy's action in dropping bombs on American property in a neutral country.

Though British and American oil company officials were agreed that damage to their Arabian properties from the raid was slight, Assistant Secretary of State A. A. Berle, jr., summoned the Italian Ambassador, Prince Colonna, to the State Department and delivered the protest verbally to him.

The State Department itself, informing correspondents of its action, characterized the protest as "formal," a procedure followed only in cases of considerable gravity.

The protest could not be extended to the simultaneous Italian bombing of American oil properties on the island of Bahrein, off the Saudi Arabian coast, because Bahrein is technically a British protectorate and thus subject to the fortunes of war.

It was expected among diplomatic officials that Italy would make some reply to the American protest. There was no indication that Berle had demanded compensation for damage caused by the Fascist warplanes.

Berle's move put the full force of American diplomatic machinery behind protests filed with the State Department Monday by James A. Moffett, vice president of the Standard Oil Co., of California and chairman of the board of the Cal-Tex Corporation, parent organization of the Bahrein Petroleum Co., Ltd., whose properties were damaged.

Donovan, D. C. Auditor, Dies

Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, 64, District auditor and budget chief, died last night at his home, 2924 Cortland Place Northwest. He had been ill three weeks.

Dr. William S. Greaney, his physician, attributed Maj. Donovan's death to an "overworked heart."

A native of Washington, Maj. Donovan had served the District for 49 years, and since 1919, when appointed auditor, had been a key figure in the management of the District government.

At the time of his death, Maj. Donovan held the post of auditor, budget officer, comptroller, and personnel board chairman.

During the World War, he was in charge of administering the selective service law here, and was commissioned a major.

King Carol and Magda Lupescu Under 'Polite Arrest' in Spain

By the Associated Press

Seville, Spain, Oct. 23.—Deposed King Carol and his buxom woman friend, Magda Lupescu, were under a polite form of arrest today—still pursued by the unsatisfied enmity that had driven them from Rumania only last month and now threatens to break up at last their long, determined association.

Under guard with them in their hotel here was one of the most faithful of all the King's men, pale, thin Ernest Urdareanu, who was minister of the palace in the days before the pro-Nazi Rumanian Iron Guard howled Carol from an unhappy throne last September 6.

Ahead of them was the prospect that Urdareanu and Madame Lupescu—although probably not Carol himself—would be returned to Rumania to face trial at the hands of the Iron Guardists, who have accused the little palace politician and Carol's red-haired feminine associate of various crimes against the state.

The Infanta Beatriz of Saxe-Coburg, aunt of Carol, visited him in a high and huffy regal dither today as he chain-smoked cigars and cigarettes.

She declined to see Mme. Lupescu and spoke sternly to Carol over his treatment of his divorced wife, Queen Helen. Carol looked somewhat browbeaten when he bade farewell to his aunt.

Carol and Madame Lupescu were taken into custody, punctiliously but nonetheless real, yesterday.

A police officer appeared at the hotel and told Carol, Lupescu and Urdareanu that their movements were no longer free. He went first

U. S. Warns She'll Protect Philippines

Aerial Defenses To Be Reinforced; 2 Fighter Squadrons Ordered to Manila

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The United States acted yesterday to reinforce its slim aerial defenses in the Philippines and served notice it would defend the Far Eastern Commonwealth against any attack.

Simultaneously with a statement by Secretary of the Navy Knox that the islands would be defended "as long as they are under our flag," the Army ordered two squadrons of fighting planes to sail for Manila from San Francisco.

The addition of 30 or more pursuit planes manned by some 320 officers and men possibly will triple the Army's present air defenses against bomb attack on the islands. Now in the Philippines is a single pursuit squadron and one squadron each of bombers and observation planes, plus miscellaneous craft.

"We Can Defend Anything"

Questioned as to whether the islands could be defended—a point raised by many military experts in view of their great distance from any first class American naval base—Knox snapped:

"We can defend anything."

He declared he had nothing further to say at this time regarding his statement Tuesday, that the United States "must and will" have more bases in the Pacific.

Asked about plans for sending American ships to Australia or Singapore on a "good will cruise"—a move he has said was a "good idea"—the Navy Secretary said there are no such plans "now," emphasizing the latter word.

The reinforcement of Philippine defenses, which follows closely moves to strengthen the defenses of Hawaii, will be confined for the time being to Army warplanes, it was indicated. Knox said the Navy had no plans at present for adding to the Asiatic fleet, a force of some 40-odd ships basing at Manila.

Fleet Shift "Pure Bunk"

"Pure bunk" was Knox's answer to a report that the United States Fleet was gathering at Guam to move to the Philippines. He refused to comment on a report of a pending shakeup in the high command, declaring he would never talk about such matters until they happen. President Roosevelt denied the report last week.

The Navy chief also disclosed that an agreement has been reached between British and American autho-

200 Seized At Nude Show

Police bagged three unveiled dancers and their audience of some 200 men last night at the Pythian Temple, 1016 Ninth Street Northwest.

Led by Capt. J. A. Sullivan, of Second Precinct, a squad of eight officers stopped the show by arresting the girls on charges of indecent exposure and two men on charges of conducting an indecent performance.

They and the $2-a-head audience were taken to Second Precinct Station in four patrol wagons, which shuttled back and forth for an hour before the job was completed. Members of the audience were released as Government witnesses for appearance today with the chief defendants in Police Court.

Pythian Hall officials said they had rented the place to the Overseas Veterans Club for a "dance," and police said the man who made the arrangements for the veterans was Percy W. Graves, 38, of 303 Thirteenth Street Southeast. He and the alleged master of ceremonies, Herbert M. Dickinson, 44, of 114 Seventeenth Street Southeast, were charged with conducting the show.

Agreement Ends Fort Meade Strike

The strike of 250 carpenters, which threatened to prevent completion on schedule of cantonments at Fort Meade, Md., for the expanding Army was settled yesterday when the War Department agreed to pay double time for all work on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays and all work over 40 hours a week.

According to H. W. Blumenberg, general representative of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, an A. F. of L. affiliate, the agreement was made retroactive to include overtime pay for October 5 and 6 and October 12 and 13.

Roosevelt Pledges Peace, Calls Warmonger Charge Fantasy; Willkie Assails 'Public Bribery'

G. O. P. Nominee Tells N. Y. Forum U. S. Funds 'Sap State Independence'

(Willkie Text, Page 8.)

By William B. Ardery
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Oct. 23.—Wendell L. Willkie declared tonight that "by public bribery and the usurpation of functions formerly delegated to the States" the Roosevelt Administration has attempted to "make the various State and local governments subservient to Washington."

In an address for the annual forum of the New York Herald Tribune, the Republican Presidential nominee said:

"In city after city, and in State after State, public officials have campaigned on the record of their ability to obtain for their constituents a larger share of the money being poured out by the Federal Government.

"By arbitrary grants-in-aid, by subsidized public works, and by Federal manipulation of relief money, the New Deal has sapped the independence of the States.

"The local governments are encouraged to become dependent upon Federal funds and local officials are controlled by the deadly threat of the withdrawal of Federal aid."

Willkie said that "by the judicious use of Federal patronage" the New Deal had "strengthened the grip of corrupt political machines upon our cities."

"And these machines, in turn," he continued, "are throwing their enormous weight into the present election in an effort to deliver to the New Deal the electoral vote of some of the biggest States in the Union."

Willkie spoke shortly after listening to President Roosevelt's radio

Roosevelt to Visit Illinois, He Reveals

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 23 (AP).—President Roosevelt notified Gov. John Stelle today that he planned an inspection visit to the Scott Field, near East St. Louis, and Chanute Field, Rantoul, both in Illinois, but the message did not specify a date for the visit.

Aides of the Governor said they "expected" the President would come to this State some time next week.

Both Chanute and Scott Fields are training areas for the Air Corps technical school where thousands of enlisted men and some officers are taught technical phases of flying. Brig. Gen. Gerald C. Brant is commandant.

120,000 Here To Cast Votes November 5

Rush for Absentee Ballots Under Way At Party Bureaus

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Approximately 120,000 residents of Washington will cast their ballots either for President Roosevelt or Wendell L. Willkie on or before November 5, according to estimates of party officials yesterday, regardless of the constitutional ban which keeps the Capital from participating in national elections.

The ballots will go by mail to the States where the District residents maintain a legal or voting residence. Some of them already are en route to insure arrival before an early deadline which some States have fixed for absentee votes.

The rush is just beginning at the respective absentee ballot bureaus of the Democratic and Republican National Committees, but that is bad enough at times to give the volunteer workers the jitters. The peak will be reached next week.

Both Republican and Democratic Party officials agree that more Washingtonians are taking an active interest in the forthcoming election than in any previous Presidential contest in their time. District residents who have let their legal residence lapse in recent years

81 D. C. Draft Board Aides Appointed

Faced with the selective service lottery's "full speed ahead" signal Tuesday, the Board of Commissioners yesterday made public the appointment of 81 Capital draft officials—24 Government appeal agents, 48 examining physicians and a nine-man medical advisory board.

One Government representative and two doctors will serve with each of the local selection boards. The former will represent the Government in disputed cases while the doctors will decide medical questions in borderline classifications.

Since only an appeals board with five or more members is yet to be named, Washington's conscription machinery stands virtually primed for its major task—selection of local men of military caliber for Class 1-A.

Membership of the Medical Advisory Board, vested with supreme authority in cases of deferment for physical reasons, was released late yesterday.

Dr. Charles S. White, prominent surgeon of 1801 I Street Northwest, is chairman. Other members are Lewis C. Ecker, 1725 N Street Northwest; W. T. Davis, 927 Farragut Square Northwest; W. C. 2 Million More Under Pay Act

The 40-hour work week goes into effect today for 2,000,000 additional workers, under the wage-hour act.

Henceforth they will receive time and one-half for all hours above 40 worked in any one week.

Col. Philip B. Fleming, Administrator of the act, last night heralded the effective date of the provision by declaring that the law does not impede national defense and thus there is no present need to amend it.

Fleming addressed the Nation over an N. B. C. network.

He said he desired to point out that the availability of unemployed millions and of quick training programs "make the present effort to modify the act premature."

Eager to Serve

Women Rush to Get Job Of Mothering New Army

Thousands of the Nation's women want to join the Army.

Some women are said to suspect the motive isn't always patriotic.

The War Department made this dual discovery yesterday in the deluge of inquiries that followed its announcement of qualifications for hostesses the Army intends to install in 33 military training camps.

The flood of hostess applications came by telephone and mail to the Munitions Building and Army posts throughout the country. Newspapers received scores of calls. The War Department could give no accurate estimate of the application total. It was too busy answering inquiries and trying to decide how best to respond to other letters whose thesis was:

"Man's place is in the home, particularly with women in the Army."

It seems the impression is being spread that hostess is just a nice word for a woman with designing inclinations and no fit person for away-from-home association with loyal but amenable husbands.

The War Department has had letters of this type by scores, including one purporting to be from an organization of "wives in Philadelphia." It was a collective letter charging the department with inviting the moral decline of husbands and sons. The Army was accused of arranging for the "rupture of home ties, disregarding the holiness of marriage" and making possible a year-long revel for "men who have just been waiting for an excuse to get away from home."

The War Department holds such fears groundless. "The women who

Denies Any Secret Pacts

The President described as "the worst bombshell of fear which Republican leaders have let loose on this people" an accusation that the Administration has entered secret agreements with foreign nations. He said:

"I give you this most solemn assurance: There is no secret treaty, no secret obligation, no secret commitment, no secret understanding in any shape or form, direct or indirect, with any other government, or any other nation in any part of the world, to involve this nation in any war or for any other purpose."

Mr. Roosevelt defended his Administration as a guardian of the rights of labor and a powerful stimulus to economic recovery.

Hitler and Generals Meet With Franco

Rumors of Vast Portent Are Rife Among Spaniards

ler's No. 1 treaty writer).

Foreign correspondents in Berlin were given renewed warning today that speculation on the diplomatic policy of the Reich, activities of leading governmental personalities and possible changes and developments in the European situation could not be tolerated.

The hairline dividing the legitimate transmission of news from the offense of "political espionage" has thereby been drawn so fine that little more than official communiques can be transmitted abroad.

Neutral diplomats, however, point out that this meeting, following as it does Herr Hitler's conference yesterday with M. Laval, highlights once more the dominating factor of the European situation today, namely that the campaign against the British Isles is playing a role secondary to events centering on the Mediterranean. That the current diplomatic activities will give way in due course to military operations must seem probable to students of recent European history.

The meeting between Hitler and Franco is viewed by neutral diplomats, therefore, in this light.

Possibilities Outlined

[The United Press, in an undated dispatch, suggested these possibilities:

[1. Franco, under Hitler's promise that French Morocco and British Gibraltar will be handed over to Spain after the war, may decide to give far greater aid to the Italo-German combine to which he still owes an unpaid debt for their aid in his civil war.

[. Franco may agree to let Hitler send German troops through Spain to attack Gibraltar in an effort to close the western entrance of the Mediterranean against the British fleet. This possibility was also advanced by the New York Times' London correspondents.

[3. Franco also may turn over to Germany and Italy strategic air and naval bases such as the Balearic Islands, the Canaries and Spanish North Africa.

[The unlikely alternative to this, of course, would be a formal declaration of war by Spain against Britain and a direct land attack on Gibraltar.]

Madrid, Oct. 23 (AP).—Adolf Hitler and Francisco Franco met today in the first of a series of secretive but obviously momentous conferences with the likely intent of fitting Spain as well as France into a solid continental phalanx against Britain.

Held in Railway Car

The first two and one-half-hour meeting was held this afternoon in a Spanish railway car at the border between Hendaye, France, and Irun, Spain, where the Pyrenees fold sreenly down toward the Bay of Biscay.

Another meeting was to be held tonight, and probably a third tomorrow, but no official communique was expected before morning.

From official Spain there was only a long-withheld announcement that a meeting occurred.

The Spanish press announced in jubilant headlines that Europe is "on the eve of great events," the United Press said. The afternoon newspaper Informacions said major events "will be precipitated before the United States elections" 13 days hence.]

Spain was rife with rumors and speculation.

Some Spaniards, who last week welcomed reports that the possibility of Spanish entrance into the war had been excluded, now experienced a new uneasiness.

There were others who said they thought the meetings, scheduled to continue tonight and tomorrow, were mere window-dressing for effect on world opinion.

The fact that Hitler himself has moved in, both for Yesterday's conference in Paris with Pierre Laval, and for the parleys with Franco, was taken, however, as some indication of the importance of the stakes.

The general Spanish view was at least this: Another big nail has been hammered home to fasten the Spanish flag alongside those of Germany, Italy and Japan in the Axis powers' projected new world order.

Other speculations centered on possible shifting of war emphasis to the Mediterranean, which Spain considers is her vital space as much as Italy's; and on means to combat the spread of "free French" de Gaulle sentiment in French Africa, particularly with an eye on French Morocco, focus of Spain's plans.

Plan to 'Warn' America

Bucharest, Oct. 23 (AP).—The Rumanian newspaper "Universul" carried on its front page in heavy black type today a Berlin dispatch which said the Axis powers now plan:

The entrance of Spain into the war immediately, with an attack first on Gibraltar, the British Mediterranean fortress.

Definite military and naval action by Japan as a result of Britain's reopening of the Burma Road for war supplies to China.

Entrance of France into the war as a belligerent before the November 5 election in the United States.

The dispatch, to which diplomatic sources here attached much importance, said the Axis powers were determined to strike out in all possible directions and with all possible means before the election "in order to give a real warning to America."

to Urdareanu's rooms to notify him, while Madame Lupescu peeked through a partly opened door.

Urdareanu, raising his hands, cried out:

"They'll kill me if we are sent back to Rumania. How is extradition possible?"

Then, half hysterical, he said:

"His Majesty should hear about this!"

The strange procession—the policeman, Madame Lupescu, the trembling Urdareanu—went then to the king's suite to announce the bad news.

"Who, pray, gave you those orders?" Carol demanded of the officer.

"My superiors."

"And who are your superiors?" There was no answer.

The Rumanians were reported so cast down that they did not eat during the day, but Carol himself, after a visit from the civil governor here, with effort summoned up a bleak smile.

There followed a long period of conference and busy activity, Carol arguing in a telegram to the Madrid authorities that international law would not permit Mme. Lupescu and Urdareanu to be sent back to Rumaniafi "where the threat of death awaits them."

It was believed, although not officially, that Carol himself would not be sent back, since some quarters felt that twhat he had done in Rumania had been under the influence of Lupescu and Urdareanu.

But the former monarch would be likely to insist upon going back if Mme. Lupescu had to go, a member of the Carol party said.

[The New York Times said Carol's detention for all practical purposes has been in effect for several weeks, according to Washington diplomatic circles.

[According to this information, Ignace Jan Paderewski was fortunate in being "detained" in Spain for only a week. Paderewski, these unconfirmed reports state, owes his good fortune to the intervention of President Roosevelt.

[After Carol's abdication, the Times said, the Rumanian government inquired of a number of countries whether they would permit him to take up residence there, and Spain was among those which refused. However, Carol was given permission to traverse the country en route to Lisbon, and he and his suite, entered Spain on September 10.

[The Spanish government then sent word to Carol that he could, after all, reside in Spain indefinitely, but the former king decided to go on to Lisbon where he expected to find a means of reaching England.

[The nationalist government then sent word that it would prefer for Carol to remain in Spain for the time being. Since then he has been a prisoner to all practical purposes, with a dozen or more policemen on guard. For a time, at least, he could travel where he liked in Spain, provided he first obtained permission from the government.]

rities on the location of a United States Army-Navy naval and air base on the southern shore of Newfoundland.

He did not give the exact site for the base, but declared that a survey crew was already at work and that a supply ship was preparing to sail for the British island. There will be major Army-Navy base, he said, with a flying field some distance away.

The Navy, Knox stated, already has turned over some old guns and other materials to Latin American countries and is helping them to arm wherever it can.

"We have a moral obligation to help them build up their defenses," he added.

The plane units ordered to the Philippines are the Seventeenth Pursuit Squadron from Selfridge Field, Mich., which will sail next month, and the Twentieth Pursuit Squadron from Hamilton Field, Calif., sailing about the end of October. Besides the Army air units now in the islands, there is a squadron of Navy patrol-bombers and some 12,000 Army troops, more than half of them Filipinos.

There is also a new Philippine Army being trained by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, former American chief of staff. MacArthur has declared that a successful invasion of the islands by Japan would be too costly in men and money to undertake, but his statement was in contemplation of the completion of the Commonwealth's military program. Its president, Manuel Quezon, recently expressed doubt that the Philippines could be defended.

Meanwhile, selective service headquarters made public regulations governing the physical standards for men called into military service.

Conforming closely to previous indications, they bar men under 5 feet and over 6 feet 6 inches tall. The minimum weight is 105 pounds and the maximum whatever medical boards consider so great as to interfere with training.

A man's eyesight must be 20-100 in each eye corrected by glasses to 20-40 to be accepted, while as to hearing, the selectee must hear at 10 feet what a normal ear can hear at 20 feet. Some defects are permissible, such as a missing finger or two.

barges, troops and air forces are concentrated along the extensive coastline of the enemy-occupied countries."

The ministry put September 5 as the day the mightiest British effort was begun against the invasion that did not materialize, and it was declared that from the very first the British knew the German plans.

"Even now," the ministry said, "the story can be told only in part. Until lately it would have been extremely unwise to let the enemy know how much we knew of his preparations and of the effect on them of R. A. F. attacks.

Thus hedged, this was the gist of the ministry's account.

British pilots brought back stories of concentrations of German troops and aircraft "in every available port or harbor," and from Narvik to Bordeaux the R. A. F. went out on a continuing mission of harassment and vigilance. Each day, meantime, saw more and more imposing arrivals (of Nazi men and materials) until "hundreds of barges and other war equipment were assembled in Antwerp, Calais, Dunkerque, Ostend, Nieuport and Havre.

The Germans were getting ready—with small warships, with 150-foot self-propelled barges each able to carry two trainloads of men. They had commandeered every available barge of more than 500 tons and great numbers of workmen fitted out these craft to carry tanks and guns readily.

At hand, too, were German submarines. At one time and in a single harbor—Havre—45 big merchant ships lay ready. Inland, the Germans quickly threw up new aircraft shelters; railroad trains sped urgently back and forth between Germany and the low countries.

While the R. A. F. went on with its tireless bombing campaign, the British navy joined in briefly with a bombardment of the port of Cherbourg.

All Bases Heavily Damaged

Then followed what the ministry termed widespread damage to all the bases at Dunkerque, at Brest, at Calais—all along the coast.

The day and hour at which the Germans gave up was not mentioned; the ministry's inference was that the plan to invade died slowly and anti-climatically in the minds of the German command.

The assertion that 20 per cent of the Germans' productive capacity had been touched by British bombers in a long continuing action paralleling the counter-offensive against invasion, was attributed by the ministry to an informed foreign industrialist, and these were among the specific claims made directly or indirectly:

That the Germans had been forced to plan the rebuilding of Hamburg, their greatest seaport and site of warship construction facilities.

That there had been great destruction of German grain food supplies.

That vital factories had been brought to a standstill.

That there had been much damage to Berlin railway facilities.

That there was open criticism in Germany of the effectiveness of German antiaircraft guns.

Weather Grounds Bombers

Dirty weather kept British bombers grounded last night, and again today the Dover Strait was covered by mist, and there was heavy rain.

Balfour, in a speech, cited the growing internationalism of the R. A. F.—mentioning that United States, Polish, Czech and French pilots daily were fighting alongside British aviators—and declared that never was there a force more challenging to "the Nazi evil."

"London," he said, "is going through the ordeal by battle with much material damage to buildings and property. But Germany cannot win the war in this way.

"Our offensive raids into Germany aim at hitting the enemy in their vital military, naval and industrial spots, so as to cripple their war effort.

Turks to Act If Bulgaria Makes Move

Diplomatic Sources Report Decision Made On Counter Measures

By C. L. Sulzberger

Copyright by New York Times

Sofia, Bulgaria, Oct. 23.—Diplomatic sources report that Turkey has definitely resolved to take swift counter measures should Bulgaria compromise its neutrality at any time by permitting a German occupation in one form or another. According to these informants such an action would probably include military invasion of southern Bulgaria in order to establish defensive lines on the mountains of eastern Rumelia.

This idea has long been entertained by the Turkish general staff and it is for this reason that Bulgaria has been somewhat perturbed about the concentration of Turkish troops in Thrace which began last June. It is now believed that more than 300,000 men and much material have been stationed in European Turkey.

The question of when Bulgarian neutrality would be considered definitely compromised would be a difficult decision unless Germany begins an actual occupation of the country by dispatching troops, either by air or across the Danube from Rumania. Such action, it is said by these sources, would be regarded by Turkey—as a definite casus belli. But it is not excluded that other German encroachments which Turkey would consider menacing might also eventually be the means.

According to this information, no help from Russia is anticipated if Turkey becomes involved.

Thus it would appear that any major German move in Bulgaria may precipitate the opening of an eastern front, even if the Reich does not desire to start an Asia minor campaign until spring—as is now generally believed.

Die Is Cast

Istanbul, Oct. 23 (AP).—An editorial in the newspaper Kidam today said Germany "must envisage war with us" if she tries to force a passage through Turkey to the Suez Canal.

The newspaper, discussing the possibility of such a German maneuver, said "we have always said and we repeat once more that Turkey has taken her decision. It consists of taking arms if and when Turkey's territory and independence are attacked."

Rome Awaits Antonescu

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

Rome, Oct. 23.—The attention of Italy is still turned more intensely upon the Balkans.

The greatest stress was laid in political circles today on the coming visit to Rome of Gen. Ion Antonescu, new Rumanian dictator cooperating with the Axis, who is to arrive here November 1 for a ten-day visit. Before he arrives, it was learned today, Count Michael Teleki, Hungarian minister of agriculture will make a visit of several days.

It may be inferred that among the subjects to be discussed during Antonescu's visit will be the Vienna arbitration and its results; the removal from Rumania of all British influence and maneuvers, and the political rapprochement of Hungary and Rumania so desired by the Axis.

French Reported Giving Nazis Bases

Africa's Atlantic coast, as well as facilities in Spain and Spanish Morocco for assaults on Gibraltar.]

The German-French agreement, expected soon to replace the existing armistice arrangement, also would bring about the release of all French war prisoners.

Despite Vice Premier Pierre Laval's anxiety for a definite peace settlement, it was said that Petain and others of the cabinet refused flatly to pay the price of allying France with the Axis against Britain.

"A transition arrangement therefore was found," informed sources said, "whereby the first armistice agreement which expires within a few days will be replaced by another purely temporary arrangement similar to the one outlined."

Petain Persuaded

The Germans made it clear, these informants said, that final peace terms would depend on France's "loyal collaboration" in the new Axis-projected European order until the war's end.

Petain, it was said, was persuaded to accept such an agreement as the lesser of two evils. The only alternative was reported to have been German and Italian occupation of what remains of unoccupied France.

Earlier, reliable quarters here reported that Petain and other army leaders had bucked against any close cooperation with the Axis and that Petain's regime was to be replaced by one headed by Laval and favoring close cooperation in general, and by the French fleet in particular, with the Axis against Britain.

This latest moderate-sounding compromise report indicated that the Petain faction had won out.

Since Germany already has the entire Atlantic coast of France for possible frontal assault on Britain, the reported deal for Mediterranean, African and near eastern bases was taken to indicate a likely broadening of the Mediterranean warfare.

This would tie in with Fuehrer Hitler's personal visit yesterday to Gen. Franco of Spain.

Hitler May Meet Petain

[Hitler has asked Petain to meet him "as soon as possible" to discuss a plan of permanent peace, it is understood in Vichy, the United Press said. The meeting—with Laval and German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop—would be held before the week-end, the dispatch said, possible at Fontainebleu, where the Laval-Hitler talks took place.]

Laval's main argument for striking the best possible bargain with the Axis for cooperation with it in establishing its "new European order" was understood to be that if the Vichy government rejected the proposal, even the unoccupied zone of France might fall under German occupation.

Nazis Again Pound London After Lull

Capital Enjoys Its Quietest Night In Two Weeks

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), Oct. 24.—German raiders resumed their aerial assault on London at dawn today after giving the heavily-bombed capital one of its quietest nights in more than two weeks.

A fairly heavy burst of antiaircraft fire greeted the Nazis roaring over in the new raid.

The Germans began their night attack on London last night earlier than usual but, after a momentarily heavy stab, the raid tapered off before midnight into the lightest attack of the last 17 nights.

The outer defenses and a heavy rain over the Channel appeared to have turned back the earlier Nazi thrusts.

The "raiders passed" signal sounded about the same time as the night before—about two hours after midnight.

This period of relative quiet was in sharp contrast to the early evening, when buildings shuddered for a time under the impact of frequent bombs.

The attack succeeded a day and night of a comparative lull, in which, however, one direct hit Tuesday night demolished part of a department store turned into an air raid shelter and took an estimated toll of 25 lives.

Eleven dead had been taken from the ruined part of the building, but altogether 25 persons were believed to have been trapped when an oil bomb and a broken gas main combined to sweep the ruins with flame.

Despite the disaster, the store opened for business in an undamaged section of the building.

London had but one alarm yesterday, and it lasted only a few minutes, without any German planes having reached the city.

The same thick fog which reduced the city's Tuesday night raids to mere sporadic affairs, apparently kept most of the German Luftwaffe earthbound.

Four persons were killed in London Tuesday night however, and in one Midland town the Germans made a two hour raid with some casualties.

Meanwhile, to relieve London's growing transportation problem, the ministry of transport ordered 2,000 buses brought in from provincial cities.

Arms Centers Hit, Nazis Say

Berlin, Oct. 23 (AP).—A lane of fires along both sides of the Thames River was reported by the German high command today to have been started by overnight Nazi air raiders in attacks on London. Centers of Britain's armament industries also were bombed, it said.

The high command listed Coventry and Birmingham as sites of the "war essential industries" which were bombed. Two German planes were reported lost.

U. S. Envoys Have Right in Politics, Jackson Holds

The Republican National Committee last night published an exchange of letters between Republican National Chairman Martin and Secretary of State Cordell Hull in which, on advice of Attorney General Jackson, Hull rejected Martin's contention that several diplomats campaigning for the Roosevelt-Wallace ticket are violating the Hatch "Clean Politics" Act.

These envoys include John Cudahy, Ambassador to Belgium; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Minister to Norway, and Anthony Drexel Biddle, Ambassador to Poland. Jackson held that these and other diplomats were exempt under the provision which excludes policy-making officials of the Government from the Hatch Act's prohibitions.

"This is a long stretch of the Hatch Act and a dangerous admission by the Secretary of State that people without training or experience in foreign affairs, and whose only equipment for the offices they hold has been political or financial aid to the party, can determine our foreign policy in a time like the present when peace or war hangs in the balance," the committee said.

Business Driven To 'Wailing Wall,' G.O.P. Rally Told

The New Deal has driven all private enterprise to the "wailing wall," Mrs. Elizabeth Butler Howry, former officer of the Women's National Democratic Club, declared last night before an audience of 300 in Pierce Hall, Sixteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest.

"In the old America the Government regulated business," she said. "Today it has superseded it."

Mrs. Howry, who was principal speaker at the rally sponsored by the League of Republican Women, charged that "the New Deal rubber-stamp Congress has given the President many unrestricted powers."

Aiken Calls D.A.R. Fifth Columnists

John W. Aiken, candidate for President of the Socialist Labor Party, last night addressed an audience of 31 persons in the Continental Hotel, where, in the lobby, 21 persons listened to Franklin D. Roosevelt on the radio.

Because they have either used or tolerated illegal tactics in attempts to suppress minority groups, Aiken said, the Dies Committee, the American Legion and the Daughters of the American Revolution constitute the "real fifth column in America."

"You had better not look in our direction if you seek the fifth column," he declared, "you had better look at the very pillars of society."

Gayda Claims 6 Ships Sunk In Convoy

Italian Editor Implies Between 3,000 and 4,000 Britons Were Lost

By the Associated Press

Rome, Oct. 23.—Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, asserted today that six ships of a large British convoy were sunk with the loss of all hands by Italian war vessels in Sunday's battle of the Red Sea, already reported yesterday by the Italian high command.

Gayda estimated that the convoy, made up of 36 large ships with a strong naval escort, carried 22,000 troops, implying that one-sixth of that number, between 3,000 and 4,000 men, was lost.

(The British Admiralty yesterday declared that none of the vessels in the convoy was damaged and that the only British casualties in the battle were three men wounded aboard the destroyer Kimberley, which later blew up the Italian destroyer Francesco Nullo.)

Gayda said he believed the convoy was carrying 10,000 British troops en route from Singapore to strengthen the British forces in the Near East and a full colonial division of 12,000 men from England.

The vessels from England, Gayda said, came by way of the Cape of Good Hope and joined a convoy from India at Aden.

A British air bombardment of Italian troops between Salum and Sidi Barrani in northern Egypt in which one soldier was killed and several were wounded was reported today by the Italian high command.

The high command said Alexandria was bombed for two hours, starting fires in warehouses and igniting oil supplies.

British Attack Transport

London, Oct. 23 (AP).—The Royal Air Force communique tonight said British bombers yesterday made attacks on Italian working parties and transport between Buqbuq and Salum. "Direct hits were scored on motor transport, water tanks and tented camps, causing casualties and damage.

"Enemy aircraft made an attack yesterday on the Island of Perim in the Straits of Bab El Mandeb.

The British also reported raids on Dessie, Ethiopia, Assab, Bahardar, Danghela, Gura Asmara and Kassala.

"From all operations our aircraft returned to their respective bases."

N. Y. Post Sees Resignation Of Kennedy

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—The New York Post says that Joseph P. Kennedy, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, who is now en route home by clipper, has informed President Roosevelt that under no circumstances will he return to his post and that he intends to make public the reasons for his decision.

His action, the article continues, is owing to what he considered persistent disregard for his views by the President—and to a conviction that President Roosevelt's promises of aid to Great Britain have not been fulfilled.

The Ambassador, the Post states, has resented the sending to Great Britain of special army and navy missions and of special envoys—such as Col. William Donovan—to deal with special phases of Anglo-American affairs.

He was described as resentful of the tendency of the President to give less weight to his views on European matters than to those of William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to France.

The article states that, well aware of Kennedy's attitude, the President has done everything possible to keep the ambassador at his post at least until after the election, but that Kennedy evidently is determined to have his say while it may still have some influence on the vote—hence his return at this time.

Hull Expects Him to Keep Post

By the Associated Press

Secretary of State Hull said yesterday he had no information on the plans of Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, who is now en route from London to the United States.

The secretary was asked at his press conference about London press comment which was regarded as indicating that the ambassador would not return to England.

Hull said he had no further information since he announced a few days ago that Kennedy was coming home and that as far as he knew the ambassador would go back to his post.

Rome Foresees Separate Talks With French

Italian Support Of German Moves Predicted, However

By the Associated Press

Rome, Oct. 23.—An Axis move to prevent France from falling again under the influence of Great Britain—possibly to be used as a battlefield for a British land offensive against Germany—was reported tonight as Adolf Hitler's aim in negotiations with French Vice Premier Pierre Laval.

Foreign circles heard that Fuehrer sounded out Laval on a three-point plan for "collaboration" between France and the Rome-Berlin Axis powers:

Laval would have still greater power in France, although the aged Premier Marshal Philippe Petain, World War "Hero of Verdun," would remain as the governmental figurehead.

French functionaires would be allowed to resume their administrative posts in the German-occupied area, including Paris.

Germany would aid in France's "reconstruction."

Whether military collaboration was envisaged as reported abroad could not be confirmed here.

Separate Italian parleys with the French were forecast after the completion of negotiations undertaken by Hitler. Italian support of any German moves was taken for granted, since Hitler and Premier Mussolini are understood to have agreed on this point at their recent Brenner Pass meeting.

Germans would remain in the occupied area—particularly along the so-called "invasion" coast on the English Channel — but Germans would probably turn the administration back to France, informed sources said.

In addition, it was said, Germany might lend technical military collaboration to France to protect the country against British "intrigue."

Japan States Intent to Cancel Sealing Treaty

Held Sign of Tension But Tokyo Expects To Offer New Pact

By the Associated Press

Japan's treaty relations with the United States were altered further yesterday by Tokyo's notice of abrogation of a 1911 four-power convention for the protection of fur seals in certain areas of the Pacific.

Officials long have known of Japan's dissatisfaction with the agreement, but the sudden notice of termination without prior discussion was regarded as another sign of tension between the two countries.

Like the commercial treaty of the same year which the United States abrogated after Japan's attack on China, the fur sealing convention requires one year's notice for termination.

The Tokyo announcement said proposals for revisions would be submitted.

Secretary Hull said the notice had not yet been received here and that there had been on official advance intimation that Japan contemplated such action.

Secretary Hull declined to comment on other phases of Far Eastern affairs, including Tokyo press assertions that unless the Netherlands East Indies complied with Japanese requests for oil supplies, "we must resort to armed force and make them comply."

At his press conference Hull referred only to his previous statements on the East Indies, in one of which he declared that "intervention in the domestic affairs of the Netherlands Indies or any alteration of their status quo by other than peaceful processes would be prejudicial to the cause of stability, peace and security not only in the region of the Netherlands Indies but in the entire Pacific area."

Peace Offer Reported

London, Oct. 23 (AP).—Diplomatic sources reported today that the Japanese, pleased by the ease with which they had virutally taken over French Indo-China, had offered new and easier terms for a quick peace to the Chinese leader Chiang Kai-shek.

These were the terms as they were understood by informants here:

The Yangtze Delta to be demilitarized.

Five provinces in North China to form an autonomous state under Chinese sovereignty but Japan to have full economic control.

Recognition by China of the independence of Manchukuo.

Japanese concessions to be established in all Chinese ports.

A report also was current during the day that Japan was seeking a new formula for peaceful relations with Britain and that Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, British ambassador to Tokyo, had held important conversations on the subject at the time Britain reopened the Burma Road to the transport of arms to China.

Unofficial sources said it was understood he was told that Japan's new alliance with Germany and Italy had an unpublished escape clause permitting each party to determine under what conditions it would go to war to aid the others.

Angry members of the House of Commons meanwhile requested that steps be taken to prevent Dutch East Indies oil from reaching Japan.

R. R. Butler, undersecretary of state for foreign affairs, said the decision rested with the Dutch East Indies. Butler observed that Britain and the United States were "being kept fully informed" on the oil matter.

Auto Injuries Fatal to Man, 82

An 82-year-old man died yesterday of injuries suffered when he was struck by an automobile Monday.

The victim was John B. Williams, colored, of 2819 Elvans Road Southeast, who was hurt internally while walking at Sheridan and Bowen Roads Southeast by an automobile driven, police reported, by William O. Proctor, colored, 25, of 1506 Frankford Road Southeast.

1000 F Street Northwest.

Meanwhile, national selective service officials predicted an early revision of the tentative quotas announced Saturday, calling for induction of 3,982 selectives from the District.

There will be "almast constant" reassessment of the figures for the District and 48 States as volunteering and out-of-area registration percentages become resolved in the draft picture, it was said.

The latter factor is expected to cut sharply into the local quota as more than 10 per cent of the District's 114,000 registrants were from 48 States and the Territories.

Selection experts also called attention to the fact that quotas here will be shaken up with the breakdown into Class 1 and deferred categories.

From several of Washington's more populous board areas there will be mass exemptions and deferments. In one area, for example, upwards of 2,000 clergymen who are automatically exempt were understood to have registered. A proportionately smaller quota than that based on registration figures will be applied here so as not to work an injustice on the lesser number of registrants actually available for military service.

Dispute Imperiling Defense Contract 'Amicably Settled'

Settlement of a threatened strike of 120 workers constructing a 10,000,000 cubic-foot tank for the Washington Gas Light Co. at Chillum, Md., yesterday averted possible labor trouble involving a $15,000,000 Federal defense contract.

The workmen are employed by Bartlett & Haywood, Boltimore construction firm which is building gun carriages and tanks for the Army. Two weeks ago a strike was called on the $800,000 gas tank project, but the men went back to work a few days later pending negotiations of a dispute over payment of the prevailing Washington wage of $1.50 an hour and over hiring nonunion workers.

Government conciliators pressed for settlement, fearing spread of the dispute to Baltimore employes of the contractor. Charles J. McGowan, vice president of the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers and a member of the Defense Advisory Commission, said the dispute was "amicably adjusted," but declined to reveal the terms.

Kennedy Flies To Lisbon, Spain

Copyright by New York Times

London, Oct. 23. — Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy flew to Lisbon today in a private plane put at his disposal by the British government. Though officially he is returning to Washington for consultations, his intimates here agree he will not return to London. He is due in New York Friday on the clipper.

The Ambassador will go straight to Washington to report to Secretary of State Hull and President Rooseveit and will then go to Palm Beach for a rest.

There are reports here that he is seeking a job in the Administration Defense Program, but if this does not materialize he will undoubtedly stay out of politics for a while and write a book about his experiences here during the last three years. What part if any, he will take in the election campaign is not known.

Attacks on Willkie Laid to Stirring Up Of Class Prejudice

By Edwin C. Stein
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, Oct. 23.—Alfred E. Smith tonight predicted that millions of Democrats will vote on November 5 for Wendell L. Willkie because, he said, of the complete failure of the New Deal.

He charged that recent egg assaults on Willkie and his wife were due to "appeals to bigotry," and declared that President Roosevelt was "the greatest offender."

"Tell me," Smith demanded of a large Brooklyn audience of Democrats-for-Willkie, "tell me what's happened to the country that a lovely American lady like Mrs. Willkie, and her husband, on a crusade to save this country, are spattered with eggs?"

Cheered by Throng

"I'll tell you what it is, it is appeals to bigotry—to setting up class against class—and the chief apostle . . . the man in the White House is himself the greatest offender."

Speaking to a cheering throng in the Brooklyn Academy of Music and to a nationwide radio audience of Democrats-for-Willkie in observance of "No Third Term Day," the former New York Governor and Democratic Presidential nominee in 1928 bitterly assailed the New Deal and sarcastically pictured "the third-term candidate" as being the indispensible man—for political favors and patronage.

Smith did not mention President Roosevelt by name during his extemporaneous address.

Characterizing the New Deal as "the greatest aggregation of crackpots ever gathered together in one place in the whole history of the world," the former Governor drew thunderous cheers when he said:

"I came down on the train today with Wendell Willkie. I think you'll agree that I'm enough of a judge to know a real man when I see him. There's a ring of sincerity and earnestness about him that commands respect, even in hostile territory."

Deserted Platform, He Says

Smith said he had known political parties "to forget one or two or maybe three planks" of a platform but not until the New Deal did he find a party which "not only forgot the platform but did the directly opposite thing" to what it had promised.

Aside from repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, he said, the platform of 1932 "went into the ashcan."

"The candidate said 'I stand upon the platform 100 per cent.'" Smith recalled, and added: "God help anything that he is only 50 per cent for."

Auditorium Jammed

The Academy Auditorium, in which Smith spoke, was jammed to its seating capacity of 2,200—and several hundred were standing.

"I was amused," Smith said, "and I want you to share it with me, when I read in the paper that the New Deal publicity bureau was active with the smear pot in an effort to create an atmosphere that made Wendell Willkie a bigot. Nothing could be more stupid. . . .

"When he was a delegate to the 1924 convention in Madison Square Garden, the convention controlled entirely by the Klan, what happened? He voted for me for the nomination for the Presidency."

Voted Against Klan

Smith added:

"And when the resolution was offered to admit the klan, in no uncertain terms some member of the Ohio delegation of which he was a member, called for a poll so that each man had to stand up in his place and be counted, and Wendell Willkie stood up . . . and voted against the klan. He certainly was not thinking of campaigning at that time, he was expressing his honest sentiment."

Smith called Roosevelt "the indispensable man—indispensable to the recipients of political patronage and his political faith, and that is the group that made up the so-called Democratic convention that was held at Chicago, when, incidentally, the name of Jefferson was booed.

"Of course that convention drafted its candidate. Drafted, eh? bunk and boloney!

"As a matter of fact he was the candidate all along and used the power and patronage of his office to demand the nomination at the hands of the party leaders.

Charges Hitler Tactics

"Furthermore, he (Roosevelt) refused to let the convention select the Vice President. He said 'no, I will do that. I will save the convention the trouble.'

"And the other day he said, 'Democracy is safe while we have free elections.'

"Do you know," Smith shouted, "that that is exactly what Hitler said to the German people? The only difference between him saying it and Hitler is that Hitler says it in German.

"Try and get him out of power! Nothing doing!"

address from Philadelphia.

Before starting his prepared address, Willkie said that the forum had contributed to public discussion.

"You know, I believe in public discussion, even in face-to-face discussion," he added. "When I believe another man has falsified the record, I like to look him face to face and say so."

Willkie contended that the Chief Executive had given the impression in his Philadelphia speech "that we were in the campaign of 1932" and had not discussed the issues of 1940.

"As I listened over the radio this evening to the glowing report made by the present third-term candidate of the prosperous condition of the United States," he added, "I could not help wondering how under such circumstances there could be any indispensable man."

Willkie returned earlier to the heart of the home territory of Democratic National Chairman Edward J. Flynn and told a cheering crowd in The Bronx Coliseum that the best way to prevent the proscription of any group in America is to take the country "off the road to inflation and financial chaos."

Before a crowd estimated by police at 15,000, Willkie declared that "a great majority of Americans have decided again to be free—free from the domination and the control of a cynical government that seeks to get American citizens to vote the way it wants."

Thousands of persons lined the streets, jamming the sidewalks and slowing his motorcade from the Mott Haven Station to the coliseum.

Willkie said that in New York "where 73 per cent of us are of foreign descent," people knew that the greatest hope for all groups "is to make America a prosperous America."

He said that oppression against classes always has grown from economic depression, and argued that bigotry always has arisen in nations which "have gone down the road of bankruptcy or of inflation or depression."

A swift auto ride brought Willkie to the Manhattan Center in Midtown New York, where he addressed a crowd estimated by Police Lieut. Joseph Gross at 8,000.

The meeting was under the auspices of the Democrats for Willkie Organization. The chairman was John W. Hanes, former Under-Secretary of the Treasury in the Roosevelt Administration.

There was booing when Willkie asserted that President Roosevelt "says he is the only indispensable man" to administer the Government. The nominee added:

"There were other men in that Democratic Convention in Chicago—if you call it such—who knew as much or more about government than he does. . . .

"The truth is that the reason he controlled that convention after having stricken down every other aspirant . . . was that he wanted to continue to hold the power of that office.

"I want to call upon the people to reject this modern demonstration of ambitious views."

120,000 in District to Vote for President but They'll Do It by Absentee Ballot; Rush Begins at Party Bureaus are now trying frantically to have their names restored.

Five Hundred Requests Daily

The Democratic absentee ballot bureau, at 743 Fourteenth Street, had recorded 5,946 notarizations at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon and estimated that requests for ballots were coming in at the rate of 500 a day.

The Republican bureau, at Fifteenth and H streets was so swamped with visitors, telephone calls and letters, it was said, that no estimate could be given as to the number of requests for ballots.

The Hoover-Smith campaign in 1928 was considered the "last word" in pre-election activity in Washington, a veteran of 20 years' experience said. But the Roosevelt-Willkie drive will surpass it by far, he predicted.

The Republicans claim only between 35,000 and 40,000 of the estimated 120,000 eligible voters in metropolitan Washington. These are made up of 20,000 Government employes and 15,000 professional and businessmen and their wives.

Democrats Visit Willkie Bureau

Persons visiting the Willkie absentee ballot bureau are not asked their political affiliations, the director of information said. Many visitors, however, volunteer that they are Democrats who wish to vote for the G. O. P. nominee. The bureau gets many calls from Government employes, who "don't dare" be seen entering the headquarters, the official said.

Mrs. Walter H. Maloney, chairman of the absentee voters committee of the Democrats, is busier than most high-powered executives as she talks with inquiring visitors between frequent telephone calls. Twenty-four volunteer workers, chiefly women, are under her direction.

She said that 150,000 letters had been sent out to District residents and that the Democratic balloting is expected to surpass that of 1936 when close to 80,000 votes were cast.

Absentee voters whose ballots must reach their home States by November 1 are already having their ballots notarized, Mrs. Maloney said. Among these are Alabama, Ohio, Tennessee and New York. The latter, however, are handled chiefly by a separate New York committee in the Willard Hotel.

States Ban Mail Votes

West Virginia, which recently was charged with registering hundreds of bona fide Washingtonians, also has a separate absentee voters' bureau at 219 First Street Northeast. About 12,000 voters were said to have been registered.

Eleven States permit no absentee balloting. They are Delaware, Florida, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, New Jersey, New Mexico, Pennsylvania, and South Dakota.

Several States accept absentee ballots only if they are postmarked on the day of election. They include Colorado, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island. A number of States require that the ballots be received on November 1, 2, 3 or 4 rather than on November 5. Connecticut specifies that they must be mailed three days prior to November 2.

The Hatch Act admittedly has hampered the Democratic absentee bureau in that formerly many Government employes helped round up the votes for their respective States. Many of them used part of their annual leave, according to Mrs. Maloney. This year none of them dares to be seen at the voting headquarters.

Actually only a minority of the absentee voters clear through the respective bureaus as most voters send their ballots direct. Moreover, Government employes have notaries handy.

Guard Demands Many Reforms

Urges 'Factual Policy' in Reporting Defense News

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

High officers of the National Guard from every State closed their annual conference here yesterday, after firing a volley of resolutions at conditions they contend threaten the very existence of the Guard.

They elected as president, Maj. Gen. Edward Martin, of Pennsylvania, who reminded them their organizations soon would be in Federal service where "I don't know what's in store for us; it may be training, it may be a great campaign."

"We have come to another emergency," he said, "when it is necessary for our citizen soldiery to attain even greater heights than in our other conflicts. They must be better physically than at any time in the history of the world; more mentally alert and ready to sacrifice even more time to military affairs than heretofore.

"We may have only a year's training," he continued, "but let us send these men back to their homes better Americans by reason of this training. I believe if we had compulsory military training for every physically qualified young man we would have better citizens.

"There is only one objective now for any dictator and that is the United States." He gestured toward a flag on the platform. "Remember that is the emblem of a people who have the right of free speech, the freedom of the press, the right to assemble and to petition their Government, rights held by no other people on earth."

Without debate and without a single dissenting vote, the conference adopted, one after another, 16 resolutions offered by Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding the Twenty-ninth Division and adjutant general of Maryland, chairman of the resolutions committee. Outstanding among them were those which:

Demanded action to induce press and radio to impose a "self-censorship," especially of "so-called special articles based on hearsay and speculation which destroy the confidence of the American people in the armed service and, consciously or unconsciously, sabotage the program." The resolution called for a "positive factual press policy," Maj. Gen. John F. Williams, chief of the National Guard Bureau, announced a press officer would be attached to his bureau.

Defense Plan Projected

Directed the executive council to "devise a plan for national defense for presentation to the War Department and to Congress, whereby the National Guard will be perpetuated as a first-line component of the Army after the termination of the training period. This matter, termed in the resolution "the most vital question confronting" the conference, would bear out recommendations of Gen. Reckord in his report as chairman of the Legislative Committee that a program for Guard reorganization be settled upon by the Guard itself.

Demanded that the National Defense Act of 1920 be followed in physical examination of field and general officers before induction into Federal service so the nation may not lose "officers of experience in whose training there has been invested large sums at public expense." The resolution directed the executive board to "take such steps as may be necessary to change existing regulations and policies of the War Department" to insure that examining medical boards should be composed at least 50 per cent of Guard officers and that the examination should be no stricter than that required by the Defense Act for officers granted Federal recognition.

Ask Pay Remedy

Asked that the training period be extended from one year, as now provided, to "not less than one year," to bridge the gap of several months between induction of Guard units and induction of the selected men they are to train.

Directed the executive council to "take steps" to remedy existing inequalities in pay and allowances between officers and men of the Guard and those of the Regular Army.

Asked that National Guard officers be assigned to National Selective Service Headquarters, "since the Guard will absorb and train the major portion of selected men the first year."

Demanded, in a resolution lumping together numerous complaints and requests reaching the committee, that "inequalities in treatment, pay, privileges and prerogatives," between officers and men of the Guard and those of the "other component parts of the Army of the United States" be adjusted. These "things are unfair, unjust and inconsistent with consolidation of national defense activities and amalgamation" of all components, the resolution declared.

The association sent greetings and felicitations to Gen. John J. Pershing, commander of the American Expeditionary Force in France in 1917-1918.

Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood (retired), former Third Corps Area commander, spoke briefly.

In an address yesterday morning, Brig. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, assistant chief of staff in charge of plans and training, said tactics employed in Germany's blitzkrieg against Holland, Belgium and France differed but little from those long studied here.

"Outside of the exploitation of air power in strategic operations, the current war has brought forth very little in the way of revolutionary changes which can be termed basic," he said. "Principal changes are new allotments of weapons and equipment, including masses of mechanized forces."

Other officers elected, besides Gen. Martin, were Maj. Gen. George E. Leach, Minnesota, vice president; Maj. Gen. Walter A. DeLamater, New York, past president; Brig. Gen. Fred M. Waterbury, New York, secretary, and Brig. Gen. Milton R. McLean, treasurer.

Corps area vice presidents chosen were Maj. Gen. Frank Needham, Massachusetts, First Corps; Brig. Gen. William A. Higgins, New Jersey, Second; Brig. Gen. Washington Bowie, Maryland, Third; Brig. Gen. James C. Dozier, South Carolina, Fourth; Maj. Gen. Robert H. Tyndal, Indiana, Fifth; Maj. Gen. Roy D. Keehn, Sixth; Maj. Gen. Matthew A. Tinsley, Seventh; Brevet Lieut. Gen. John A. Hulen, Texas, Eighth, and Maj. Gen. W. M. Barrows, California, Ninth.

All but four of the officers are retired, their election indicating the policy of the association to leave its affairs in the hands of inactive officers during the period of field training. The constitution was amended at this session to permit membership of retired officers.

Summer Encore Predicted Today

That impressario of heat and cold, the local weather bureau, has predicted that an encore of summer weather will be presented in the Washington area today. Although some cloudiness is expected, a high temperature of 77 degrees, 7 more than yesterday, has been forecast.

The long-range forecast issued for the Middle Atlantic States, which includes the District Zone, predicted generally fair weather through Saturday. Temperatures are expected to be much higher and slightly above normal.

Local temperature recordings yesterday showed the highest temperature to be 70 degrees at 4 p. m., and lowest, 38, at 5 a. m. Lowest expected today is about 50.

G. B. Cortelyou Dies; Friend Of 3 Presidents

Held Cabinet Posts Under First Roosevelt, Cleveland, McKinley

By the Associated Press

Huntington, N. Y., Oct. 23.—George Bruce Cortelyou, confidante of three Presidents, holder of three Cabinet posts and one of the Nation's outstanding financiers, was found dead in his bed today. He was 78.

The former president of the Consolidated Gas Co., of New York, which became one of the largest and most important utilities of the country during his administration, Cortelyou had been retired for the last five years.

Born in New York City, he was the son of a family whose ancestors played a distinctive role in the Colonial and Revolutionary history of his native State.

Active Republican

He began his Governmental career in 1891 as a private secretary to the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General. Later, he was stenographer, executive clerk, confidential clerk and secretary to three Presidents—Cleveland, McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt — and under Roosevelt held the Cabinet posts of Secretary of Labor and Commerce, Postmaster General and Secretary of the Treasury.

Active for many years in Republican politics, he was national chairman for three years, from 1904 until 1907.

He was with McKinley when the President was shot by an assassin at Buffalo, N. Y., and remained beside his stricken chief's bedside night and day until his death.

Death came to him in his sleep. He was found dead by his wife, the former Lily Morris Hinds, of Hempstead, N. Y., this morning.

Last Friday he suffered a heart attack, his son, George B. Cortelyou, jr. said, but rallied and appeared to be recovering good health.

For the past five years he lived quietly on his 10-acre estate, Harbor Lights, at Halesite, a small community near here, on the brow of a hill overlooking Huntington Bay.

Defense Action Unanimous, HendersonSays

Commission Member Declares There Has Been No Dissension

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 23.—Leon Henderson, of the Defense Commission, disclosed "a secret" tonight to "fortify the contention of harmony"—"in all these months, no commission decision has been other than unanimous."

The commissioner in charge of price stabilization told the Herald Tribune forum that "we are strong in those elements which make free nations strong" and that "since early 1938 we, as a people, have been on the march upward."

Henderson said that "unless the guesstimators' signs of the zodiac fail, industrial production will climb 15 per cent above current levels within the next year or so" and that out of this increase "this country will get defense, reemployment and a higher standard of living. . . .

"Let no one tell you that free enterprise has lost its vigor. There have been less of the nice, juicy, quick, speculative profits—but profits based upon good, sound, efficient production in American plants have been restored to the level of the twenties."

"Barrier of Language"

The liberties of the Western Hemisphere must be defended not only on military and economic fronts, but—equally important—in the field of ideas, Nelson A. Rockefeller told the forum earlier.

Rockefeller, coordinator of commercial and cultural relations between the American republics for the National Defense Council, declared that to meet the challenge of the totalitarian propaganda machine, the "barrier of language" must first be overcome.

"Spanish, or its sister tongue Portuguese, must become a second language in North America," he said. "It is my hope that English may become a second tongue for the republics of the South.

"We must increasingly use the radio, the press and the cinema to promote a more effective interchange of the finest in the thought and action of both continents."

Other Noted Speakers

Other speakers today included: Archibald MacLeish, Librarian of Congress, who called upon artists to revitalize the Nation's faith in democracy and make it a fighting faith.

Somerset Maugham, British novelist, who declared England is defending its culture and the ideals cherished by Americans; Mlle. Eve Curie, speaking by radio from London, who said the Nazis daily bombings are not harming British spirit; and Robert Montgomery, movie star.

Mercury Sales To Japan Banned By Cardenas

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Mexico City, Oct. 23.—President Lazaro Cardenas, apparently in the interest of hemisphere solidarity in opposing assistance to aggressor nations, has intervened personally to place an effective embargo on shipment of Mexican mercury to Japan, it was learned tonight. No official explanation was given.

It is deemed in foreign diplomatic circles as one of the hardest blows that Mexico has struck against the dictator nations, inasmuch as Japan has been depending almost entirely upon the Mexican market for her supply of mercury. In addition reports tonight indicate that it may be followed by a general prohibition on the sale of other vital war materials to totalitarian governments.

The move followed closely cancelation by Cardenas of a large oil exploration concession held by a Japanese-controlled company.

go into our training camps will be carefully selected and of the highest character, distinctly on the motherly side," said one officer. "Our idea simply was to provide the camps with those womanly touches that would remind a boy of home," said another.

Col. William R. Arnold, chief of chaplains, referred to the Army's program to provide one chaplain for every 1,000 men and to his hope that each camp will have a chapel.

"We'll show them what religion is," he said.

Another officer made it clear that with or without hostesses, the Army is still the Army. "The trainee's year in the Army will be no threering circus," he declared.

Only 99 hostesses are to be hired, it was pointed out. Applicants are urged to communicate with commanders of the various Army posts and the Army's nine corps areas where the jobs will be filled. Maj. Gen. Walter Grant is commander of the Third Corps Area, which includes Washington and has its headquarters in Baltimore.

Welles Says U.S. Must Defend All Americas

Urges Businessmen To Aid Solidarity Of Hemisphere

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 23.—Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles today characterized Western Hemisphere solidarity as a "reality" and asserted, at the same time, that defense of the United States must involve an ability to "repel an attack against, or an invasion of, any part of the New World."

Speaking before the Baltimore Advertising Club, Welles, who toured European belligerent capitals for the Administration in the spring, directed most of his talk to the relations of American nations.

Dangers Long Foreseen

Efforts to cement the relationships of American nations are not new, he asserted, for the United States "long ago" foresaw the potential dangers of "forces of military conquest and social revolution."

Because of this, he said, the United States cooperated fully with 20 other American republics in creating a continental friendship which would mean "a solid front in the moment of crisis."

Businessmen will play a large part in the continued solidarity of the republics, he said, "for there is no greater reinforcement to greater friendly political relations between countries than a large volume of fair and profitable trade."

The economies of all the nations can be strengthened, he declared, by a higher degree of diversified local production, both of raw materials and manufactured products.

Urges Sacrifices

Also promising mutual benefit is the stimulation of production on the American continent of strategic raw materials including rubber, manila hemp, manganese, tin, chromium and quinine.

He urged that "all American peoples" at this "moment of grave danger, be prepared to make such sacrifices as may be required in the common interest" to maintain and strengthen the firm foundation for inter-American cooperation.

Christmas Now Comes Twice a Year, It Seems

"Christmas in July" Has Xmas-Tree Preview; Holdovers Do Not Affect "Great Dictator" Date; This, That and the Other About the Theater

BELL

Both written and directed by the resourceful Mr. Sturges, this new item takes the simple idea of an under clerk who first wins a $25,000 slogan contest, then loses it and then wins it again, and blows it up into one of the season's laughing hits. There is a nice romance woven into it, too, and the story is packed with hilarious human touches that give it a soundness that is far removed from the purely farcical. It is the perfect subject, in length as well as content, to be hooked up with Jimmy Dorsey's stage appearance, along with his orchestra and specialists.

And what a cast! Dick Powell has never been so good as in the role of the man who is up and down and up again, and Ellen Drew, as the girl, has never been better. They are only the main pivots for the highly explosive performances of Raymond Walburn, Ernest Truex, William Demarest, Alexander Carr—and where has he been all these years?—Franklin Pangborn, Georgia Caine, Ferike Boros and scores more.

Mr. Sturges is a pretty valuable chattel to have around any studio and Paramount ought to be thankful it is the one.

Having engineered a snow storm as part of the "Christmas in July" advance ballyhoo, the Warner executives yesterday carried out the mid-winter motif by dressing up the projection room with a miniature Christmas tree, gay with all the usual baubles, and gifts for all of the boys and girls of the press. And I mean gifts. Most of the others could carry theirs, but since we don't touch the stuff, ours was delivered out at the house—I hope—in a box! And a Happy New Year to you.

The current crop of pictures on the midcity screens must not be so bad. Carole Lombard and Charles Laughton, in "They Knew What They Wanted," at RKO-Keith's; Gary Cooper and Walter Brennan, in "The Westerner," at the Palace, and "The Baker's Wife," at the Little, all are being held over. "Knute Rockne—All American" goes into the Metropolitan tomorrow and Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland in "Strike Up the Band," into the Columbia. That continuation of the run of "The Westerner," of course, sets "Down Argentine Way" back a week, but still leaves Chaplin's "The Great Dictator" apparently firmly set for November 7 on F Street—just to keep the record straight.

Those who knew him when and watch closely, will discover more than one shot of Elias Breeskin in "City for Conquest," now on the screen at the Earle and a film that also would warrant an extended run if the Thirteenth Street house had not abandoned the policy by reason of pressure of bookings. Elias is the younger brother of Daniel Breeskin and uncle of Barnee, of the Shoreham, and is the concertmaster in that giant symphony orchestra that plays Arthur Kennedy's master composition in the picture. Not only that, Elias, former Washington concert violinist, concertmaster at the Metropolitan and conductor of the best orchestra the Tivoli Theater ever had, coached Kennedy in the art of leading a stageful of musicians. Elias has picked up a few pounds since last we saw him and looks more and more like Dan.

Coming a little closer to their date than the Warners with their "Christmas," the Washington Players are hooking their forthcoming "Rip Van Winkle" production onto Halloween. The playing dates are Friday night, November 1 and Saturday afternoon of the second. This is the item, washed out of the National Sylvan Theater's summer festival series last August, in which Harry Welker, of Baltimore's Vagabond Theater, will play the title role, supported by a practically de luxe cast of the Capital's resident actors.

Speaking of next week's bill at the Earle, as somebody was back there, Jimmy Dorsey and his band boys have a busy week-end ahead of them. They will appear five times tomorrow, six times on Saturday and four times on Sunday. Watch the Film Time Tables that appears daily somewhere around here.

That high-strung, Southern gentleman, Sam Galanty, division manager of Columbia Pictures, will be glad to learn that his company has inaugurated a new wrinkle in the advance exploitation of "Arizona," costarring Jean Arthur and William Holden. They have organized the "Arizona" Flying Press Squadron, composed of Ed Rosenbaum, in the East; Lou Smith and Lew Neuman, on the West Coast; Mark Freeland, in the South, and Jack Thoma, in the Midwest. All the boys are flying over their routes, with baggage 24-sheeted with their mission. Eddie Rosenbaum already has been here against the coming of a December booking, still a little green around the gills from a rough trip from Boston.

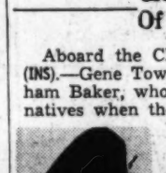
Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Aboard the Chief, Oct. 23 (INS).—Gene Towne and Graham Baker, who startled the natives when they sponsored the Hollywood career of Elsie, the cow, have another surprise up their sleeves, but this time it is more legitimate. The two RKO writer-producers are readying a picture, "How to Meet a Man," which is described as another "The Women"—only more so. Instead of an all-femme cast, making monkeys of their boy friends, the gentlemen will be present to take their punishment. But it is the ambitious cast the boys are trying to line up that had me marveling. They are negotiating with none other than Wendy Hiller and Leslie Howard (both in London) by cable. For the second, but equally important bracket of costarring roles, they want Martha Scott and Melvyn Douglas and Virginia Bruce is also up for one of the important parts.



PARSONS

Cesar Romero not only gets a brand-new contract at Twentieth Century-Fox, but today they handed him the star role in "Tall, Dark and Handsome." I must say this musical has undergone considerable remodeling since it was first announced. Betty Grable, previously scheduled for the girl's role, is out and Virginia Gilmore steps in as Cesar's leading lady.

Marlene Dietrich heads for New Orleans soon to attend the premiere of "Seven Sinners," at the Orpheum Theater, October 31. No, New Orleans is not the background of "Seven Sinners," but it is the locale of the new Dietrich picture coming up—"Countess of New Orleans," which Rene Clair will direct. This is the first time I've heard of a premiere jaunt sent out in advance to drum up business for a picture not yet under way.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: When Tom Brown gets back from his personals watch for an announcement of his engagement to Ronnie Warner, the daughter of H. B. Warner; Helen Mack and Tom McAvity are being married at Santa Barbara and leave for a San Francisco honeymoon; Rosalind Russell is insisting on a four months' vacation—she is so tired after four pictures in a row; the Bar of Music is still getting a big midnight crowd. Olivia de Havilland (who is affecting oh, such plainness now in dress and make-up) was with John McClain. Norma Auer and two friends were joined later by Mischa, who spent the rest of the evening dancing with his estranged wife.

Latest football gag on the coast is that "Knute Rockne—All American" is so good it will probably get the Rose Bowl bid; Rudy Vallee has certainly been playing the lone wolf since his return to Hollywood. He was at the House of Murphy all by his lonesome three nights in a row; Jane Withers has her first unchaperoned "date" tomorrow night. George Marshall, jr., is the hero; Wendy Barrie was at Ciro's with Count Cassini, who used to have eyes only for Betty Grable; Loren Grey, son of the late Zane Grey and well known in Hollywood, has joined the Naval Reserves; grand to get into Chicago for just a few hours and see old friends.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Oct. 23.

ONE OF THE PRINCETON neighbors of Prof. Albert Einstein has an 8-year-old daughter who made it a practice to visit the famed scientist every afternoon. After many weeks of these daily visits, the girl's mother finally went to see Einstein, and apologized to him for her daughter's constant interruption of his scientific thought . . . "Oh, not at all," Einstein assured her. "I enjoy her visits very much, and we get along well" . . . "Really?" asked the lady. "But what can you and a little 8-year-old girl have in common?" . . . "A great deal," Einstein explained. "I love the jelly beans she brings me—and she loves the way I do her arithmetic lessons."

DR. JAMES G. McDONALD, head of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, is the leading candidate for the presidency of C. C. N. Y. Mayor LaGuardia won't announce the appointment for several months . . . The only item delaying the sale of "Tobacco Road" to Twentieth Century-Fox is the question of screen credits.

COL. WILLIAM DONOVAN, who once was the Republican candidate for Governor, lectured a group of Republicans in Rochester a few days ago about their behavior. "Suppose this were a spot we had to defend against the enemy and I was your sergeant," said Wild Bill, hero of the Sixty-ninth Regiment. "Suppose you thought I was undependable, inefficient and even crooked. And there was another sergeant whom you liked, but I had been assigned to you and he had not. Would you fail to defend this place against the enemy because you hated your sergeant? . . . Let's behave like Americans—and not just Republicans or Democrats."

DISTRICT ATTORNEY O'Dwyer, of Brooklyn, revealed this story at Lindy's Saturday night: It concerns five members of Murder, Inc., who had been involved in a morals charge. The victim was a 16-year-old girl, who was so affected by her terrifying experience that any questioning about the crime might result in neurotic reaction . . . Four of these men were indicted for murder, and so this morals charge was secondary. But the fifth man—Leo Tocci, who was missing—could not be linked with homicide . . . O'Dwyer dreaded the day when Tocci would be caught, for it meant that the girl would have to appear before the Grand Jury and recite the details . . . That case, however, will never be prosecuted. Tocci was found in the Miami surf—murdered.

THE UNITED STATES EMPLOYMENT SERVICE now is completing a "Dictionary of Job Titles" for civilian defense personnel. It will simplify the employment of skilled workers by manufacturers throughout the country . . . Chester Erskine, the director who planted radish seeds in the soil at Park Avenue and Fifty-fourth Street, wasn't able to harvest his crop. The radishes came up, but when the park department read the story of Erskine's agricultural pursuits his radishes were plowed under . . . The tip about the relative of LaGuardia's former secretary—a tip which became a front page story when Emil K. Ellis, the city council's investigator, unearthed the fact that more than $100,000 in photography work had gone to that relative—came from an anonymous phone-caller.

JEROME WEIDMAN, author of the current best seller, "Letter of Credit," was Ilka Chase's guest of honor at her "Luncheon at the Waldorf" broadcast last Saturday . . . Later these two experts of vitriol discussed the art of the insult. "It's getting so you can't insult anybody any more," Ilka complained. "You can't do it in your own house, because you're the host. You can't do it in other people's houses, because you're their guest. You can't do it if they're young, because it's unfair to pick on a child. And you can't do it if they're old, because that's discourteous. What's an insulting person to do? . . . "Do what I do," Weidman suggested. "Get 'em at the age of 35—in Central Park."

THE NEW YORK DAILY NEWS now has a girl working as copy boy, and two more are expected to be hired—as a protective measure in the event that the copy boys are drafted . . . Lady Mendl, who is over 70, has done her first decorating job since her repatriation. The former Elsie de Wolfe has decorated a suite at the St. Regis, which will be known henceforth as the "Elsie de Wolfe Suite" . . . Bunty Bacon, who was divorced from heiress "Cookie" Young, passed his physical examination Monday for enlistment in the Navy . . . When Ann Corio, the strip-teaser, was not permitted to fulfill her scheduled appearance at the British War Relief Ball in Detroit last Saturday, Clifton Webb tendered a party in her honor at another cafe.

Build Gigantic Set For Bonnie Baker

Construction of a huge two-acre musical setting for "You're the One," Bonnie Baker and Orrin Tucker comedy, was started on Paramount's Stage 15 last week.

Designed by Haldane Douglas, the background stretches 125 feet high over the same area where Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Mary Martin and the Abbott Dancers recently completed chorus scenes for "Love Thy Neighbor."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Oct. 23.

Claudette Colbert knew what she was talking about when she said "Arise, My Love," was her best picture. Her part is so magnificent, and she's so well suited to it, that it's hard to tell where one leaves off and the other begins, they're so well blended. And for the first time since he's been with us, they've gotten a fine performance out of Ray Milland. But what a part! He was lucky not only in having Mitch Leisen direct him but also in that Mitch has a tailoring shop and saw to it that at least he's properly clothed. Heretofore his coats have looked as though they might have been fitted on Charles Laughton.

HOPPER

At long last that swell actor, Walter Abel, has something he can get his teeth into, and did he romp home with it! The picture's beautifully written, produced, directed and acted. But the war background and pleas for patriotism so subtly injected terrified me.

Ironic that picture should have been previewed on the very day that 16,000,000 young Americans signed up for conscription. It all seems to fit together like a well-cut-out puzzle—which in no way is a criticism of the picture, but of America's state of mind.

It's just too bad in a town where so much money is raised for everything that Dorothy Varden, an extra girl, had to raffle off her fur cape to raise money enough for an operation.

Before Wes Ruggles and his wife planed out for New York and the Clipper ship for South America, they bought tickets good for a year with open dates. If they like a place, they'll linger. Imagine being able to take a year off—yet why not?

Incidentally, Betty Lasky, Jesse's daughter, while down in South America, became engaged to one of its citizens . . . Her father, Jesse, can afford to take bows not only for his new play, "Quiet, Please," which gives the audience a chance to participate in the fun—and how they lapped it up!—but also for signing up Henry Hathaway to direct Gary Cooper in "Sergeant York," which should be something!

When Director Billy Wellman was having difficulty clearing ads of babies to be used in "Reaching for the Sun" he said, "Skip it—I'll use my own." And you'll see three of the cutest babies you've ever laid your peepers on. They belong to Wellman, who's expecting a fourth. With such kids, he'll be able to retire soon and put them to work.

Noel Coward and Cary Grant took up where they left off about a month ago—I mean Noel was Cary's house guest. Seems Noel's changed his mind again about spending the duration of the war in England. He's on his first trip to Australia. But don't let me disturb you—it's on government business.

Speaking of that, a national magazine had a heck of a time getting a color picture of Vivien Leigh to help "Bundles for Britain" cause. At the time set she didn't feel photogenic. Imagine a giggle, if you knew Alexander Korda's pet name for Vivien and Laurence Olivier. They both begin with "B."

The National's "Pygmalion" Tops Week

Ruth Chatterton Plays Shaw's ComedyMonday; Other Incoming Bills

"PYGMALION." Ruth Chatterton plays the immortal Eliza Doolittle in this revival of the George Bernard Shaw comedy opening a week's engagement at the National Theater Monday evening. Noted on the screen as an emotional actress, Miss Chatterton triumphed early in her film career in less serious roles. The revival is under the direction of the English Auriol Lee and its stop at the National will be the first week of a coast-to-coast tour. Barry Thompson heads the supporting company in the role in which filmgoers will recall Leslie Howard. Lemuel Ayres has designed the production. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Capitol

"KIT CARSON." Jon Hall plays the title role in this new release depicting the expedition sent by the Army under John C. Fremont to discover the shortest overland route to California. Lynn Bari, Dana Andrews, Ward Bond, Harold Huber and C. Henry Gordon have the featured roles. The stage revue, "Off the Boat," offers Bobby May, juggling jester; Al Stone and Tish Lee, "Hit Wits;" the Lathrop Brothers and Virginia Lee, dancing favorites, and Madelyn Killeen, songstress. The Rhythm Rockets offer a novelty turn, "The Animal Trainer." Opens this morning.

Earle

"CHRISTMAS IN JULY." Dick Powell and Ellen Drew costar in Preston Sturges' and Paul Jones' successor to their rollicking "The Great McGinty." The comedy tells of a radio advertising campaign and the young man who thinks he wins first prize. Raymond Walburn, Ernest Truex, Franklin Pangborn and Alexander Carr are the featured players. Jimmy Dorsey brings his saxaphone and his popular band as the stage feature of the new Earle bill. Helen O'Connell and Bob Eberle are his vocalists and the Three Fonzal Boys and Bob Evans are also featured on the stage. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"THEY KNEW WHAT THEY WANTED." Charles Laughton, Carole Lombard and William Gargan continue for a second week in Robert Ardrey's screen adaptation of Sidney Howard's Pulitzer prize play. Harry Carey and Frank Fay top the supporting cast in this story of a likeable Italian in the wine fields of California. The "March of Time's" release on "Britain's R. A. F." also continues at the Fifteenth street house.

Metropolitan

"KNUTE ROCKNE—ALL AMERICAN." The big football film of the year returns to the downtown sector after a bang-up week at the Earle. Palace

By far the finest film of the pioneer West since "Stagecoach." "The Westerner" begins a second week at the Palace this morning, with Gary Cooper again playing one of those lean, silent men, of which there is no better screen interpreter, and with Walter Brennan making the most of rich opportunity. "The Westerner" brings many an unexpected twist to Texas' dear, dead, rough-and-tumble past.

For while the Cooper hero is the central figure of "The Westerner," its dominating influence is a wryly evil villain, "Judge" Roy Bean. The law west of the Pecos was the "Judge's" law, administered in his own barroom and performed with bloody, fiery dispatch by leather-skinned, whisky-drinking hombres.

But one soft passion "Judge" Bean had. That was a knightly ardor for the fabled Lily Langtry. He'd never seen her in the flesh, but his courtroom-bar was plastered with posters of the Jersey Lily.

So it was, when G. Cooper arrived at this den of shaggy-faced Brennan and obviously a horse thief. The fellow thought fast, remembered as how he knew the Jersey Lily, had a lock of her hair, in fact, and if the "Judge" would like that precious material, how about postponing the hanging? "The Westerner" goes on from there, introducing the strife between the cattle men and the homesteaders.

Such elegant mirth is pantomimed in "The Westerner" that were it only for this ability to be silent so much of the time, the film still would have its points. But it is further rolled along by a richly humorous "Judge" Bean mimed by that excellent actor, Walter Brennan. He makes the scoundrel funny and even lovable, but nonetheless a ruthless villain. Cooper's easy fashion rises to a charming scene in which he clips Lily Langtry's lock of hair from the heroine's head. For action, he has a cracking good fight with young actor Forrest Tucker, a Washington lad enjoying his first really "meaty" role in the films. Opposite Cooper is producer Samuel Goldwyn's latest discovery, Doris Davenport.

$100,000 Collection To Mark Opening of New Schwartz Store

Eighty-seven antique watches, which clicked off the time centuries ago and oceans away, have come together in a silent array in a $100,000 exhibition in Washington this week.

The ancient timepieces will feature the celebration of today's opening of a new unit of Charles Schwartz & Son, jewelers, at 1305 F Street Northwest. Some of the watches were still ticking when the company was founded back in 1888.

The collection, which belongs to Louis Aisenstein, New York City importer of watches, shows that time-telling has been traditionally an ornamental occupation—for all its utilitarian purpose.

The smallest watch in the group is shaped like an insect. Bright-colored enameled wings fold back to disclose a dial smaller than a dime. This watch, made to be worn as a pin, is Swiss and is dated 1885.

Laregst timepiece in the collection is a Japanese calendar clock, suitable for desk use. An additional dial on its face represents the signs of the Oriental zodiac. This clock, made about 1815, has its case set with colored stones.

An oddly ornamental watch in the group is shaped like a tiny lyre and decorated with colored enamel. It was made in France more than 100 years ago. A gold watch, as thin as a wafer, was said to have been made for a French exposition in 1860. Another watch has a cluster of six dials on its face—for telling time in zones in various parts of the world. Oldest watch in the collection is a gold biscuit-shaped model, said to have been made in the sixteenth century in London.

The collection will be on display through Tuesday at the new store. A preview was afforded, the first part of this week, in the window of the other Schwartz store which is located at 707 Seventh Street Northwest.

The business, with its personnel at the start consisting of the founder, the late Charles Schwartz and a single employe, has grown to an organization of more than 50 employes. In 1914, Sam Schwartz, son of the founder and present head of the firm, joined the business as a general handyman.

A gilded clock similar to the one which is a landmark at the Seventh Street store, will hang also from the glass block front of the new unit.

What do you bid?

1. Pass. Here we do not show a preference for partner's first suit because of the abject weakness of our hand. It is obviously a misfit, and there is no point in taking any risk—no matter how slight—of partner's going further with the bidding. Partner can have five spades and four hearts; the suits may be equal in length; or it is also very possible that he has four spades and five hearts. If we were absolutely certain that the hand would play better in spades than hearts, then we might show a preference and take the definite risk of getting too high. But not knowing the answer, we do not go further on this hand.

2. Four spades. Only one ace and one queen, but magnificent distribution is held. Partner has opened the bidding (and we have two cards in his suit), then raised our suit. The hand fits and with the distribution must offer some play for game.

Three spades would be an underbid and, on the other side, it would take a marvelous fit to make a slam with our lack of high cards; therefore, four spades is the call.

3. Four no-trump. Partner's jump to three no-trump after our one-spade response (which may have been made on a very bad hand) shows that he has a very strong hand, probably balanced in pattern, and undoubtedly about equivalent in honor strength to an opening two no-trump bid. Therefore, if partner has the slightest additional values, a slam should be possible with our hand, which contains close to two honor tricks, a five-card suit and the very important-looking queen of clubs.

Four no-trump is the best way to offer this slam try, since, if partner has a minimum holding or has shaded his bid slightly, he can then pass at a playable contract. Of course, the four no-trump in this sequence is not conventional as no suit has been decided upon.

Text of Willkie's New York Speech on 'Issue Behind Third Term'

New Deal Aims Along Familiar Lines, He Says

Republican Nominee Addresses Forum Of Herald Tribune

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 23.—Following is the prepared text of Wendell Willkie's speech tonight at the New York Herald Tribune forum:

Today is "No Third-Term Day." All over our country thoughtful men and women have joined together to explain and to debate the great American tradition that forbids any man to hold the office of President for more than two terms.

It is not my purpose tonight to trace the historical development of that tradition, or to review the great body of argument sustaining it. That argument has been made throughout a hundred and fifty years by the the most distinguished men in both political parties. It is difficult, if not impossible, to find a single leader in American political life, since the first inauguration who has favored the position now held by the third-term candidate.

But tonight I want to go behind that tradition. I want to bring you face to face with the great issue that confronts us; the issue behind the third-term issue; the most critical issue to be brought before the American people since the days of the Civil War. That is the issue of the concentration of power.

The men who established our Government had foremost in their thoughts the preservation of the rights of the individual. To safeguard those rights, they provided a system of checks and balances. They clearly saw that if government obtained too much power its power would ultimately be used not to serve the people but to subjugate them. Limitation of the powers of government is the essence of democracy.

Familiar Pattern

In recent years we have seen this democratic concept ruthlessly violated throughout much of the world. In Europe it has been largely replaced by the doctrine of an all-powerful state, dominated by a self-styled elite class and subject to the will of one indispensable man.

These European dictators have followed a familiar pattern. They found their opportunity in economic distress and widespread unemployment—conditions which have always followed excessive government spending. To meet those conditions, they demanded emergency powers. Having secured those powers they suspended all constitutional rights, reduced the legislature to a rubber stamp, packed the judiciary, and won for themselves and their followers a perpetual term of office.

We have always thought of ourselves as a lucky people. The threat of tyranny within our borders has never heretofore extended beyond the range of a city boss, or at the most of a State politician. Our national leaders, no matter how incompetent, have always bowed in reverence to our right of free election and to the principle of the limitation of power. We are consequently amazed that the people of Europe should have permitted themselves to be so misled and to be so betrayed.

State Domination

We fail to see that the identical process which wrecked the liberties of Europe, has been going on here in America right before our eyes. We fail to recognize the stealthy concentration of power that has characterized the progress of the New Deal. We do not recognize it for what it is: A trend, partly accidental, partly deliberate, toward the establishment of state domination over our lives.

Although it may not be immediately apparent, the pattern is ominously familiar. The New Deal's first action was to declare an emergency. Seven and one-half years have passed. Sixty-seven emergencies have been declared, each justifying a grant of extraordinary powers. The general emergency still exists. And the powers increase almost month by month. . .

In a modern state, control over money is a primary instrument of power. The technique of revolution, as it has been taught by Lenin and others, recommends as the first step the seizure of control over banking.

At this moment the President holds powers over the money and credit system of the country, comparable to those of any dictator.

He is empowered to close all banks and stock exchanges.

He is empowered, in his sole discretion, to control foreign exchange transactions, to alter the gold content of the dollar, to change the value of silver, to issue $3,000,000,000 of irredeemable greenback money. These enormous powers provide the President with controls that he can exercise over the will of Congress. By a full use of them he could inflate the money supply by $12,000,000,000.

Government in Business

As a result, our private banking system has been subjugated. The Federal Reserve System has been reduced to a mere appendage of the Treasury. Its policies are determined by the overwhelming needs of the Government to finance the staggering deficits.

But the New Deal has gone much further. It has put Government itself deeply into the business of lending money. Last February, the Secretary of the Treasury reported to the Senate that 31 Government agencies have loaned nearly $25,000,000,000.

Federal agencies own in part and control in part more than 2,000 corporations having assets of $4,000,000,000. Through regulations, loans, subsidies, and fear, such agencies exert a partial control over more than 23,000 corporations having assets of $70,000,000,000.

The President has asked for and has obtained from Congress, 20 blank check appropriations totaling more than $16,000,000,000.

As is only human under such circumstances, he and those who surround him have used this great fund as a gigantic pork barrel. As must inevitably occur when such conditions are permitted, the New Deal leader has bought Congressional support by rewarding his friends and punishing his enemies in both Houses of Congress

Powerful Control

The Federal Government today includes no less than 133 administrative bodies. These include the Securities and Exchange Commission, the National Labor Relations Board, the Federal Trade Commission, and all the others. The men who run these agencies are appointed by the President. He exercises a powerful control over them by holding out the chance of reward through appointment to higher offices. In many instances these administrators are responsible to the third-term candidate and to him alone. And yet they have the power to make laws and to prosecute violators of those laws, to sit in judgment upon them and to inflict penalties, after having testified against them.

The powers of the executive, the judiciary, and the legislature, which the founders of this Government were careful to separate, are concentrated in the hands of a group of Presidential appointees. And those appointees have boldly used their powers.

In August of last year, the National Labor Relations Board made a deal with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. This provided that whenever a charge of unfair labor practices had been made or was about to be made against any concern, the RFC would blacklist that concern.

Under the law, a citizen has to be found guilty before he is punished. But not in the code of the National Labor Relations Board. Under the arrangement with the RFC, the mere charge of unfair practices was sufficient to warrant excluding the victim from Federal financial aid.

In Nazi Germany, the ownership of most business is left in private hands, but management is rigidly controlled. Here in America we have a deadly parallel. Under the SEC, a private company was recently told it could not issue bonds, but must sell stock. The men who run the SEC knew better than the men who were retained by the owners to manage that company's affairs. They insisted that the company must issue stock—or nothing.

As a result, the directors of that company, finding their business judgment overruled by a Government agency, decided to do nothing. The efforts of that business to create more jobs were blocked by bureaucracy.

No man appreciates more than I do the need for regulatory agencies. But the powers of these agencies should be more precisely defined. They should not be distorted into instruments for giving the executive complete domination of our economic life.

The President could well say toward the end of his third year in office that "in 34 months we have built up new instruments of public power," but to this frank admission he appended a strange qualification—a qualification new to American political theory. He said that in the hands of "a people's government" this power was "wholesome and proper," but that in the hands of "political puppets" it would endanger liberty.

The question, the American question is: Who shall decide as between those to whom it is safe to give power, and those to whom it is unsafe? As for me, I am not prepared to accept the decision of the third-term candidate—or of any other one man, however noble may be his motives. I say that in a democracy, the concentration of power in anybody's hands, be he saint or sinner, is unwholesome and improper.

Dependent on Funds

By public bribery and the usurpation of functions formerly delegated to the States the New Deal has sought to make the various State and local government subservient to Washington.

In city after city and in State after State, public officials have campaigned on the record of their ability to obtain for their constituents a large share of the money being poured out by the Federal Government.

By arbitrary grants-in-aid, by subsidized public works and by Federal manipulation of relief money, the New Deal has sapped the independence of the States. The local governments are encouraged to become dependent upon Federal funds, and local officials are controlled by the deadly threat of the withdrawal of Federal aid.

By the judicious use of Federal patronage, the New Deal has strengthened the grip of corrupt political machines upon our cities. And these machines, in turn are throwing their enormous weight into the present election in an effort to deliver to the New Deal the electoral vote of some of the biggest States in the Union.

Vividly Illustrated

Now this growing concentration of power has led inevitably to the abuse of power. When such an overwhelming control upon the economic and political life of a nation has been obtained by one man, his mere word becomes a potent weapon.

We saw this vividly illustrated in the spring of 1937. You will recall that at the time our own country and the rest of the world was recovering from the great depression. Commodity prices were showing improvement and business was going ahead. Had that improvement continued, all necessity for the continuance of a national emergency would have passed. We could have returned once more to the high road of democracy.

But at that critical moment what did the President do?

On April 3, 1937, he issued a statement saying that commodity prices were too high. He singled out especially for condemnation the price of copper, which was then about 17 cents a pound. And such was the force of the President's mere word in view of the enormous powers he held in his hands that commodity prices immediately began to go down. The price of copper fell from 17 cents to 10 cents by the end of the year.

It was a striking demonstration of government by personal edict. The consequences of that demonstration reached down to the very roots of our economy. Yet that act was undertaken without any hearings being held and without any sound reasons being given.

Unprecedented Power

It so happened that in the copper fields, thinking to improve their wages, the workers had made an agreement with the copper companies tying the wage rate to the price of copper. When the President, by the sheer weight of his word, drove down the price of copper, he drove down the wages of copper miners. These men who work in the mines had to go back to their families on payday with less money because one man invested with enormous power had spoken a few brief words.

There may be some businessmen who can conduct their affairs without regard to such arbitrary acts of the Administration. But I don't know of any. In my very wide acquaintance among American businessmen, I know of none that does not have in mind the discouragements and dangers to business life created by actions of this kind.

I know that there are many economic arguments covering the causes of the long continuance of that depression. But behind all the causes will be found a new kind of American Government exercising unprecedented powers. Behind all the causes will be found the fact that, whether intentionally or not, the exercise of those concentrated powers changed the course of recovery and brought about a violent depression.

That depression spread out in widening circles to offset all the rest of the democratic world. As I have shown on other occasions, in agreement with an eminent authority on these matters, that American collapse weakened the European democracies and gave the dictators their chance.

Attack Turned Back

The concentration of power in America has hurt every democracy and helped every rising dictator.

Democracy cannot survive under conditions of prolonged depressions. Depressions are the very soil in which dictatorships take root and grow to power.

In that same year the President attacked the Supreme Court—the chief remaining obstacle between him and virtually unlimited powers. You know what happened. Not even the bludgeons of patronage could move the Congress.

The people turned back this frontal attack upon the court, but time and human mortality have given Mr. Roosevelt his way. He has been able to appoint five new members to the highest bench in the land. And every one of those men has been selected from the inner circle of the New Deal.

Step by step, year by year, Mr. Roosevelt has gathered into his hands increasing power—"new instruments of power"—such power as could in his own words, provide "shackles for the liberties of the people."

And yet with all this power, the New Deal has utterly failed to solve our economic problems.

That failure was inevitable. It was the excessive concentration of power in the Government which produced the failure.

But what does this Administration now tell us?

As is only natural, it fails to recognize the causes of its failure. It asks for still more power. In this critical hour of our history, it demands that we set aside our deep-rooted principle of rotation in office.

Aggressive Spirit Dying

On its calamitous record of 7½ years, the New Deal tells us that its leader is an indispensable man. After 7½ years of utter failure, he alone can save us. We are told that he must be given more power—more power than any President of the United States ever had—the power that comes from indefinite entrenchment in office.

Concentration of power has not helped to solve our economic problems. It has inevitably made them worse. Under the bludgeons of a privileged bureaucracy American enterprise has been weakened and suppressed. The aggressive spirit of initiative which has made this country the envy of the world; which brought about a flowering of invention and industrial achievement such as had never been seen in any other land; which established the highest standard of living any nation has ever known; that spirit which was the distinguishing characteristic of America is slowly dying. It is being crushed under the sheer oppressive weight of power in the hands of a hostile Administration.

As will always happen in such cases, the New Dealers seek to allay our fears by telling us that they can concentrate political and economic power in Washington while leaving our civil liberties untouched. The very concept contradicts itself. The very meaning of civil liberties is protection of the citizen against government.

All history proves their thesis is false. Once we have submitted to the domination of our economic life by an all-powerful central government, individual liberty is gone. Without economic freedom, no freedom is safe, neither that of collective bargaining, nor of the press, nor of the churches, nor even of family relationships.

Under a directed economy the state cannot permit any dissent: form its edicts. Men must first give up the freedom to form their own judgments and submit to the all-wise dictates of the centralized authority. Once they are no longer entitled to act upon their own opinions it becomes dangerous to the state to permit them to express those opinions.

Government by emergency soon finds that in the public interests, all dissent must be suppressed. The forms of democracy may remain intact, but the spirit within these forms sickens and dies. A spirit of freedom must animate the forms if democracy is to live.

Under our American system, national elections are held only once in four years. Events are moving with incredible speed in the world today. In four years much can happen.

Four years from now, we may be living in a very different world. Four years from now America may have gone so far along the road toward state domination that it will be too late to turn back. An hour of critical decision is upon us—not next year, nor the year after—but this year—now.

We must take our stand if we are to preserve this precious democratic way of life. The New Deal asks us to perpetuate its power. This is the inevitable outcome of the course it has pursued. It asks us to keep the President in office indefinitely. It has laid down a challenge—a challenge to everything for which the American Revolution was fought—a challenge to everything for which our Constitution stands—a challenge to everything which has made America the land of hope, and the land of opportunity.

Precious Heritage

Let us pick up the challenge and hurl it back.

Our National Government must be strong and powerful to deal with international affairs. It must have certain powers to build up our defenses and protect us from the threat of war. But it can never make us strong abroad by weakening us at home. The excessive concentration of power over the domestic life of the Nation must be checked.

We, the people, must reclaim our Government. Our fathers handed down in trust to us the precious heritage of liberty. It is not ours to throw away. We hold it as trustees for unborn generations. We dare not break that trust. We must preserve it lest freedom perish from the earth.

In the words of Abraham Lincoln:

"We must nobly save or meanly lose the last best hope on earth."

An Open Letter
To His Excellency the President of the United States,
Washington, D. C.

I wrote you on September 25th last but having received no reply presume this must have escaped your attention. The issues are still vital, so allow me to repeat myself:

"Stop the War Now

This war may escape the control of man. Disease stalks in the offing—millions of children improperly fed and cared for. The plague of typhus might descend in the wake of wanton destruction and does not discriminate between friend or foe. With our vaunted, rapid modern transportation a worse enemy than yet conceived might be at our door. Every boy after reading his First Caesar dreams of being a World Conqueror—and those who have been in a position to attempt realizing their dreams have harried a world for centuries and brought incalculable woe and despair in spite of many assumed high aims. You are in a position to attempt another World Conquest of a mightier and more heroic nature and evolve a happy and peaceful solution from all the surrounding chaos by stopping the war now. Allow me to offer my services to assist your renewed efforts for peace and save the youth of England and the Continent from further slaughter."

May I suggest your calling a World Conference from representatives of all nations. Your call, while at first causing a furore, should be gratefully accepted by all right-minded humanitarians, and if successful, elevate you to a pedestal as the Hero and idol of all time.

Respectfully yours,

Mrs. J. Sergeant Cram

Wallace Approval of La Follette Threatens to Split Wisconsin Democrats

'Treacherous Betrayal,' Cry Party Leaders

Candidates Who Bolted Meeting Plan To Issue Statements

By the Associated Press

Madison, Wis., Oct. 23.—Indirect indorsement by Henry A. Wallace of Senator La Follette's reelection campaign brought a Democratic cry of "treacherous betrayal" today, and rumblings of a possible party split.

LA FOLLETTE

La Follette is running on the Progressive ticket.

President Roosevelt's close political relations with the Progressives have been the source of Democratic dissension for more than six years. The kindly nod which his running mate gave the party last night raised another loud protest.

Addressing a Democratic rally, attended by many Progressives, Wallace, Democratic candidate for Vice President, expressed appreciation of the "untiring support we in Washington have received from the Democratic and Progressive Congressmen in Wisconsin and from your Senior Senator, Robert M. La Follette."

Several Walk Out

As he spoke, the party's candidates for Governor and Senator, Francis E. McGovern and James E. Finnegan, walked out of the hall, followed by several others. Previously, some candidates had said they would bolt if Wallace failed to indorse the entire ticket.

"Henry Wallace, a former Republican, is a Vice Presidential nominee only through the courtesy of the Democratic Party," Edward Curry, Milwaukee County Democratic chairman, said today.

"He descended to a new low in political intrigue when he treacherously betrayed those persons who, unfortunately, placed him in such a high position of party trust."

Finnegan, defeated as a Garner-pledged candidate for delegate to the Democratic National Convention, said he would issue a statement tomorrow. Curry said McGovern also would have a statement.

Democrats in Third Place

From their high place in 1932, when they elected a Governor, Senator and several Representatives, the Democrats declined to third place in the 1938 election. At present they hold no Congressional seats and no important State offices.

Commenting on the "walkout," Thomas R. King, State Democratic chairman, said:

"There was no reason for McGovern leaving. Wallace gave him the best indorsement he ever has received. I think McGovern will still be elected Governor—in spite of himself.

"This faction thinks they're the only ones for Roosevelt. They say they're for Roosevelt 1,000 per cent. Then when Wallace gives a talk which was approved by Roosevelt, they don't like it. They can't say one minute they're for Roosevelt and then act like that the next minute."

Food Gifts Urged if Britain Wins

By the Associated Press

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 23.—Henry A. Wallace proposed today that gifts of American food supplies be sent to Europe, if England wins the war, to help restore "democratic and friendly governments" and eventually revive the foreign market for American agriculture.

WALLACE

The Democratic Vice Presidential nominee said such a program held the only hope that American farmers might ultimately benefit from the conflict abroad.

If England won, Wallace said in an address prepared for delivery at a Democratic rally, "I believe we can well afford to make large gifts in the hope that with our food the European peoples can set up democratic and friendly governments and once more become good neighbors and good customers.

"Our agricultural surplus in that case may be the instrument by which America can bring healing and peace to the world, if we have the vision and the courage to use our powers.

"In such a program of rebuilding, the farmers would, of course, be benefited. But you cannot look forward to any such far-seeing investment in world peace if you have a Republican Administration that believes that all money spent to strengthen our situation is poured down a rat hole."

If Germany won, Wallace said, the United States must promote marketing cooperation with South American nations to forestall any Nazi attempt to "get control of several South American countries by offering to buy their wheat and corn in return for appeasement."

"As a precaution in case of German victory," Wallace added, "we realize the value of the friendship and cooperation of South America. The Temperate Zone countries to the South are competitors with us in world markets. Unless we agree with them and they agree with us to cooperate in marketing, a victorious Germany could play us off against one another and, by dividing, conquer us one by one."

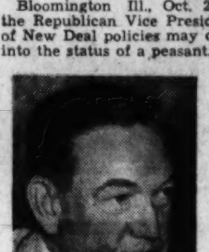
McNary Fears for Farmer's Future

By the Associated Press

Bloomington Ill., Oct. 23.—Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, the Republican Vice Presidential nominee, said today that continuation of New Deal policies may cause the American farmer's "gradual sinking into the status of a peasant."



McNARY

"A third term may sweep us into the totalitarian current, though I do not believe Mr. Roosevelt harbors that conscious intention," McNary said in a prepared campaign address.

"Apart from that subjective fear, I view with the most serious apprehension the result of continuing New Deal policies on agriculture; and, on agriculture as an occupation.

"I forsee the destruction of the farmer as an independent producing unit and his gradual sinking into the status of a peasant, dependent on an overlord, in this case the Federal Government, for instruction, guidance, protection and support—or a dole."

McNary accused "certain politicians associated with the New Deal" of attempting to "exact a kick-back" out of farm benefit checks.

He absolved his Democratic opponent, Henry A. Wallace, in his accusation, however, terming the former Secretary of Agriculture "a high-minded public servant."

McNary also said there was "a palpable attempt to influence" farmers in the November election by "prematurely prompt arrival of benefit checks."

"Ordinarily, as you know, the benefit checks come laggingly from the great check-writing machines at Washington," McNary said. "Some years the checks haven't even appeared by Christmas time.

"I am told that this year every check will reach its R. F. D. box ahead of election day; sufficiently ahead so the recipient may have time to meditate on the generosity of the dispensers of his own and other people's money at Washington."

Flynn Envisions 'Willkie Cabinet'

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—Edward J. Flynn, national Democratic chairman, offered at his press conference today the Cabinet which he said he believed Wendell L. Willkie would appoint if he were elected President.

FLYNN

As Secretary of Agriculture, he said, the Republican candidate probably would name "Wendell L. Willkie, farmer."

In making the list, Flynn added, he was "in a very serious mood."

Secretary of State—Thomas W. Lamont, of J. P. Morgan & Co.

Secretary of Labor—Tom Girdler, president of the Republic Steel Co.

Secretary of the Treasury—Ernest T. Wier, president of the National Steel Corporation.

Attorney General — Joseph M. Proskauer, formerly justice of the appellate division of the New York Supreme Court.

Secretary of the Interior—Joseph N. Pew, of Pennsylvania.

Secretary of the Navy—Roy W. Howard, publisher.

Secretary of War—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson.

"For Postmaster General," Flynn said, "he (Willkie) will probably select a person, we don't know who he is, who is sending those scurrilous unsigned postcards attacking the President."

McCormack Cites 5 Willkie 'Errors'

Representative McCormack, of Massachusetts, House Democratic leader, said in a statement last night that Wendell Willkie made "five misstatements of fact or misrepresentations in a single paragraph" of his Chicago Stadium speech last night.

McCORMACK

Mc Cormack's list of these statements and his comment on them follows:

"'Our national income is smaller,' Commerce Department statistics show national income in 1932 was $40,074,000,000. Last year it was $69,378,000,000."

"'Our workers get less.' By 1933 the Department of Commerce figure on wages and salaries had dropped to $28,531,000,000. Last year it was up to $43,054,000,000."

"'Our families get less.' Wages and salaries of $47,000,000,000 will buy twice as much for workers' families as the wages and salaries they were getting when the Republicans went out of power in 1933."

"'More than 9,000,000 of our citizens are without jobs.' Mr. Willkie continues to ignore the statistics of the National Industrial Conference Board estimating unemployment in August at 7,657,000, or about half what it was in March, 1933."

"'We have little equipment for our Army, and we have only a few hundred modern airplanes.' President Roosevelt has more than doubled the standing Army. We are turning out 950 airplanes each month and 1,600 combat engines, in addition to thousands already in the service."

War Is Issue, Says Al Smith

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—Alfred E. Smith asserted tonight that "war is the important issue" in the Presidential campaign and said he shared a general belief among people that the New Deal is trying to get us into war."

SMITH

The 1928 Democratic Presidential nominee, who dined with Wendell L. Willkie aboard the latter's campaign train, told reporters "there is no question that there has been a trend toward Willkie during the last two weeks."

Smith previously had announced his support of the Republican candidate and conferred with him only a few hours before making his first campaign speech in Willkie's behalf.

Smith, wearing his brown derby and puffing a big cigar, boarded Willkie's train at Harmon, N. Y., and then chatted with Mr. and Mrs. Willkie in their private car on the way to New York.

Hatch Asks Probe Of G.O.P. Spending

Clovis, N. Mex., Oct. 23 (AP).—Senator Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, said today he has wired the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee to investigate "disturbing reports" of Republican interpretation of the $3,000,000 campaign limitation provision of the Hatch Act.

HATCH

Hatch said he understood "that persons in charge of the Republican national committee are construing provisions of the act" so as to apply the $3,000,000 limitation separately to the various organizations supporting Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican nominee.

"In this case, and what disturbs me now, is that under such an interpretation the Republican campaign would have at least $9,000,000 if the provision were applied to each of the Willkie organizations such as the national committee, the Willkie Club and the Willkie Democrats," he said.

"Such an interpretation would clearly defeat the purposes of this provision of the act.

"It is also exactly contrary to Mr. Willkie's own decision at Colorado Springs last August, as I understood it. Then Mr. Willkie was quoted as saying he was in sympathy with the proposition that total expenditures for a campaign should not exceed $3,000,000."

Jackson Assails Willkie on Defense

Attorney General Jackson said last night that Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican Presidential nominee, was "guilty of placing profits before defense" and was conducting a "persistent fight against the conscription of property along with men."

JACKSON

"Periods of emergency often bring out the true colors in men," Jackson said in an address prepared for the radio. "Willkie showed his in this emergency. His first instinct was to protect the profits of his friends.

"He had indulged in large statements about the need for sacrifice, but sacrifice is a privilege he reserves for the majority. To him defense means sacrifice for the many but it means unlimited profits for the few."

The Attorney General said that some weeks ago a proposal was made in Congress that "to prevent profiteering the Government should have the power to operate, for a fair return to the owners, any manufacturing plant which refused, on reasonable terms, to produce necessary defense goods."

Willkie issued a "blast" against this proposal, Jackson asserted. Then, the speaker continued, Willkie "attempted to claim that he had been misunderstood," but later returned to the attack with a magazine article stating: "What could be more revealing than the bald attempt in the United States to seize control of vital American industries in peace-time by the trumped-up logic that the conscription of men on a democratic basis and the arbitrary seizure of certain businesses bear a moral relationship."

Lehman Assails Willkie 'Boast'

New York, Oct. 22.—Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, in a speech tonight, attacked the Republican Presidential candidacy of Wendell L. Willkie with an indictment of the Republican Party leadership regarding national defense.

LEHMAN

He charged that Willkie, if elected, "could never carry out" his campaign "boast" that he could more successfully achieve a strong national defense than President Roosevelt.

If Willkie as President began to work with Republican Congressional leaders, he went on, "he would find a Republican leadership that has tried to block an adequate American defense against the growing threats to this country."

He named these leaders, along with President Hoover and Alfred M. Landon, 1936 Republican Presidential candidate, as Senator Charles L. McNary, Republican Vice Presidential candidate; Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., his campaign manager and probable Speaker of the House should the Republicans win the House; Senator Hiram W. Johnson and Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, at chairmen of Willkie's Foreign Affairs Committees in the Senate and House; Senators Robert A. Taft, Arthur H. Vandenberg, Gerald P. Nye, Styles Bridges and Representative Bruce Barton, Republican candidate for United States Senator from New York.

He arraigned Messrs. McNary, Martin, Landon, Johnson, Taft, Vandenberg and Fish for opposing the neutrality law.

Keep False Teeth Purified Says Dr. Sherwin

Don't brush your false teeth or dental plates—you can't purify them that way—you can't even clean them properly that way.

Keep up with the times—get today a generous 30 cent bottle of Stera-Kleen—give your plate a bath as directed, and after the first bath your false teeth will start to sparkle with purity and cleanliness—will so glisten with beauty that you'll be proud of them. Your mouth will feel much better—rejuvenated.

Just a pinch of Stera-Kleen in a half glass of water and all slimy mucin stains and smirkiness begin to go—it's amazing—lasts for weeks—30 cents—all drug stores.

Martin Sees Big Willkie Victory

Pittsburgh, Oct. 22 (AP).—Joseph W. Martin, jr., National Republican Chairman, today predicted Wendell Willkie, Republican nominee for the Presidency, would win with more than 325 electoral votes in the November election.

MARTIN

Here for an address tonight, Martin said in an interview that Willkie's campaign had "been gathering momentum" and these States already were, or soon will be, in the Willkie columns:

All of the New England States, Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Kansas, Colorado, Wyoming, Iowa, New Jersey, Oregon, and the Dakotas.

He said the party "had a 50-50 chance" in California, Washington and Missouri.

Assails "Indefensible" Man

In an address to a rally in Duquesne Garden tonight, Martin charged President Roosevelt had "set up the greatest, the most corrupt, most arrogant and most expensive political bureaucracy ever fastened on this Nation."

"That bureaucracy," he said, "has but one purpose. It is to so manipulate and control the public funds, and the lives and the activities of the voters of this country as to perpetuate itself in power indefinitely.

"There never will come a time when this New Deal bureaucracy will be willing to relinquish office and power. There never will come a time when it will admit it is not indispensable or that its candidate is not indispensable."

Martin described the President as the "indefensible" man.

Douglas Assails Third Term

Chicago, Oct. 23 (AP).—Lewis W. Douglas, former director of the budget in the Roosevelt Administration, declared today that "to elect any man to the Presidency for three terms (particularly three consecutive terms) is deliberately to threaten democracy."

DOUGLAS

Douglas, addressing the "America, Wake Up!" crusade at the Union League Club of Chicago, urged Democrats and Republicans alike to unite to defend the "unwritten law against a third term."

"If organized violence presses in on freedom from without, a third term may press in on freedom from within," the former Democratic Congressman averred. "I plead with all Democrats who believe as I believe that loyalty to our country takes precedence over loyalty to our party to join hands with Republicans to elect Mr. Willkie.

"I would remind you that in 1912, when another Roosevelt endeavored to break this fundamental rule of American political life the Democratic Party pledged itself to implement its opposition to a third term by supporting a constitutional amendment to limit the tenure in office of the President."

Bridges Predicts G. O. P. Control of House

New York, Oct. 23.—Election of a Republican-controlled House in November was predicted today by Senator Styles Bridges, of New Hampshire, upon his return to Republican national headquarters from a speaking tour in the Middle West and Pennsylvania.

"The best estimates available in Washington predict a gain of 55 seats by the Republicans in the House," the Senator told newspapermen, "and a minimum gain of 10 seats in the Senate with a probable maximum of 12 Senate seats."

Conservatives Won't Bolt, Won't Work

Right Wing Democrats In Senate Are Staging Campaign Sitdown

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

A campaign sitdown was in progress yesterday all along the Senate Democratic conservative front, but party loyalty vows appeared to bar any sensational third-term "bolts."

Nearly a dozen Senators who might be pillars of support in a normal campaign were doing nothing actively to aid the President down the stretch, a canvass showed. Neither were they doing anything aggressively to hinder him.

With one exception, campaign inactivity appeared the rule of all in this group who had anti-third term convictions. The exception was Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, who failed of renomination.

Burke inaugurated a "two-a-day" schedule of anti-third term blasts Monday in New Jersey. In the next two weeks he will stump against the President's reelection in Connecticut, New York, Tennessee, Illinois, Michigan and Indiana.

The "party loyalty" and "straight ticket" declaration Tuesday of James A. Farley struck the theme of the Democratic conservative line of action, though few others in this number are urging other "members of my party to do likewise."

In Uvalde, Tex., Vice President Garner was sitting out the campaign in virtual seclusion, and Senator Ellison D. (Cotton Ed) Smith was sulking on his plantation near Lynchburg, S. C.

Senator Carter Glass, who led the Chicago convention's anti-third term fight, typified the stand of practically all in the Senate's right-wing Democratic bloc when he denied he would "bolt" and declared himself unalterably bound "to support the nominee of the convention."

Glass' view is said to be shared by his colleague, Senator Byrd, who is running for reelection, without opposition, and to date has been silent on the National election.

In nearby Maryland, Senator Radcliffe has declared for a third term in his own reelection race, but his colleague, Senator Tydings, one of the 1938 purge targets, has confined his campaign activity to riding with the President on a Maryland defense inspection.

In Rhode Island, Senator Gerry is campaigning for reelection and is reportedly well ahead of his opposition, but without to date mentioning the President's third-term bid.

Senator Van Nuys, of Indiana, may return home next week to support the State Democratic ticket and plug for Senator Minton's reelection, but will confine his campaign activity to that.

Prominent on the sidelines of the national campaign has been Senator George, of Georgia, whom the President unsuccessfully sought to purge in 1938. George is not lifting a finger either way in the Presidential campaign.

An exception in the Senate Democratic conservative ranks, Senator Bailey, of North Carolna, has no antithird term convictions, and has put in several licks for the President.

His colleague, Senator Reynolds, whose isolationist views incurred Administration disfavor, voyaged to South America during the campaign period. Reynolds told friends he would come back October 20 for two weeks of campaigning for Roosevelt, but recently cabled he cannot return before October 28.

War Befogs Home Issues, Says Taft

Indianapolis, Oct. 23 (AP).—Senator Robert A. Taft (Republican), Ohio, contended today the European war had enhanced "the dangers springing from the domestic policies of the New Deal."

TAFT

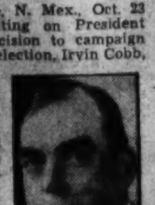
"In other words," he said at a Republican luncheon, "the people are being induced to consider aspects of the foreign situation at the expense of a more necessary consideration of the domestic angles."

Senator Taft said the Democratic National Administration "would like to take the people's minds off the 9,000,000 unemployed, off the decreased national income, off low farm prices and a national debt of $50,000,000,000."

The Political Arena

Roosevelt, Like a Parrot, Talks Much, Does Little, Says Irvin Cobb; President To Speak at Fordham U. Monday

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Oct. 23 (INS).—Commenting on President Roosevelt's decision to campaign actively for reelection, Irvin Cobb, famous writer and humorist, said in Albuquerque today:



COBB

"President Roosevelt has decided that he has inspected enough Government projects and will make a few campaign speeches.

"This reminds me of a parrot, because the parrot—of all the feathered kingdom—is the best talker, but the worst performer."

Cobb was among the first to announce himself as an antithird-term Democrat.

Roosevelt to Speak At Fordham U.

New York, Oct. 23 (INS).—President Roosevelt will visit the campus of Fordham University on Monday and will deliver an address after reviewing the Fordham R. O. T. C., the Very Rev. Robert I. Gannon, president of the university, announced today.

Father Gannon will play host to Republican Presidential Candidate Wendell Willkie on Saturday. Willkie, Mrs. Willkie and Edward A. Willkie, the candidate's brother, will be guests of Father Gannon at the annual Fordham-St. Mary's football game.

A. W. O. L. Relief Workers May Be Reimbursed

Schenectady, N. Y., Oct. 23 (AP). The city welfare department promised today to reimburse some of the 39 WPA workers who were penalized for leaving their jobs "without permission" to hear Wendell L. Willkie speak October 14.

Welfare Administrative Assistant Lawrence C. Van Epps said such men who can show the loss of two day's work and one-half hour's pay lowered their family income below the level of subsistence would receive the difference from the welfare department.

The penalties were imposed by Schenectady County WPA Supervisor Denis C. Dempsey.

Wallace, McNary Ride Same Train

Bloomington, Ill., Oct. 23 (AP).—The Democratic and Republican candidates for vice president followed the same campaign path for 127 miles today.

Democrat Henry A. Wallace and Republican Charles L. McNary rode on the same train, but in different cars, from Chicago to Bloomington, McNary got off here to give a speech later in the day. Wallace continued to Springfield, Ill.

They exchanged greetings in the diner, but breakfasted at separate tables.

'Been Drinking,' Alibi Of Egg Tossing Suspect

Chicago, Oct. 23. (AP).—A former third baseman who said he had been drinking beer and didn't know what he was doing admitted in police court today he obtained two eggs in a restaurant but said he couldn't recall throwing them at Wendell Willkie last night.

"If what people are saying is true, I'm sorry from the bottom of my heart," Charles Mulrain, 53, stationary engineer employed by the Chicago Relief Administration, told Judge Harold P. O'Connell.

Willkie was hit in the temple and Mrs. Willkie in the back with frozen eggs.

Mulrain was charged with assault with a deadly weapon. The case was continued until Friday.

Text of President Roosevelt's Talk at Philadelphia on G. O. P. 'Falsifications'

Accuses Republicans Of Using Propaganda Methods of Dictators

Philadelphia, Oct. 23.—Following is the prepared text of President Roosevelt's address tonight in Convention Hall:

Last July I stated the plain, obvious fact to the National Convention of my party that the pressure of national defense work and the conduct of foreign affairs would not allow me to conduct any campaign in the accepted definition of that term.

Since July, hardly a day or night has passed when some crisis, or some possibility of crisis in world affairs, has not called for my personal conference with the Secretary of State or other officials of the Government.

With every passing day has come some urgent problem in connection with our swift production for defense, and our mustering of the resources of the Nation.

Therefore, it is essential to adhere to the rule never to be more than 12 hours distant from Washington.

But last July I also said this to the Chicago convention: "I shall never be loath to call the attention of the Nation to deliberate or unwitting falsifications of fact which are sometimes made by political candidates."

Time to Clear Record

The time has come for me to do just that.

This night and four other nights I am taking time to point out to the American people what the more fantastic misstatements of this campaign have been. I emphasize the words "more fantastic," because it would take 365 nights to discuss all of them.

All of these misstatements cannot possibly be what I called last July "unwitting falsifications" of fact; many of them must be "deliberate falsifications" of fact.

The young people who are attending dinners in every State of the Union tonight know that they are already a part of the whole economic and social life of the nation. I am particicularly glad to discuss with them—and with you—these misstatements, and the facts which refute them.

Truthful campaign discussion of public issues is essential to the American form of government; but willful misrepresentation of fact has no place during election time or at any other time. For example, there can be no objection to any party or any candidate urging that the undeveloped water power of this nation should be harnessed by private utility companies rather than by the Government itself; or that the Social Security law should be repealed, or that the Truth-in-Securities Act should be abrogated.

Calls Technique Totalitarian

But it is entirely a different thing for any party or any candidate to state, for example, that the President of the United States telephoned to Mussolini and Hitler to sell Czecho-Slovakia down the river; or that the unfortunate unemployed of the Nation are going to be driven into concentration camps; or that the Social Security funds of the Nation will not be in existence when the workers of today become old enough to apply for them; or that the election of the present Government means the end of American democracy within four years. They know that all of these statements are false.

Certain techniques of propaganda, created and developed in dictator countries, have been imported into this campaign. It is the very simple technique of repeating and repeating falsehoods, with the idea that by constant repetition and with no contradiction, the misstatements will finally come to be believed.

Dictators have had great success in using this technique; but only because they were able to control the press and radio, and to stifle all opposition. That is why I cannot bring myself to believe that a democracy like ours, where the radio and a part of the press remain open to both sides, repetition of deliberate misstatements will ever prevail.

I make the charge now that these falsifications are being spread for the purpose of filling the minds and hearts of the American people with fear. They are used to create fear by instilling in the minds of the people doubt of each other, doubt of their Government, and doubt of the purposes of their democracy.

Has a Familiar Ring

This type of campaign has a familiar ring. It reminds us of the scarecrow of 1936, that the social security funds were going to be diverted from the pockets of the American workingman.

It reminds us of the scarecrow of 1932 that "grass will grow in the streets of a hundred cities; a thousand towns; the weeds will overrun the fields of millions of farms."

The American people will not be stampeded into panic. The effort failed before. It will fail again. They will not be scared by this blitzkrieg of verbal incendiary bombs. They are now calmly aware that once more "the only thing we have to fear is fear itself."

I consider it a public duty to answer falsifications with facts. I will not pretend that I find this an unpleasant duty. I am an old campaigner, and I love a good fight.

The Presidency is not a prize to be won by mere glittering promises. It is not a commodity to be sold by high pressure salesmanship and national advertising. The Presidency is a most sacred trust. It ought not to be dealt with on any level other than an appeal to reason and to humanity.

The worst bombshell of wear which Republican leaders have let loose on this people is the accusation that this Government, without knowledge of the Congress or of the people, has secretly entered into agreements with foreign nations. They even intimate that such commitments have endangered the security of the United States, or have pledged the participation of the United States in some foreign war.

It seems almost unnecessary to deny such a charge. But so long as the fantastic misstatement has been made, I must brand it for what it is.

I give you this most solemn assurance; there is no secret treaty, no secret obligation, no secret commitment, no secret understanding in any shape or form, direct or indirect, with any other government, or any other nation in any part of the world, to involve this Nation in any war or for any other purpose.

The desperation of partisans who can invent secret treaties drives them to try to deceive our people in other ways. Consider, for example, the false charge they make that our whole industrial system is prostrate—that business is stifled and can make no profits.

People Have Not Forgotten

The American people have not forgotten the condition of the United States in 1932. We all remember the failures of banks, the bread lines of starving men and women, the youth of the country riding around in freight cars, the farm foreclosures, the home foreclosures, the bankruptcy and the panic.

At the very hour of complete collapse, the American people called for new leadership. That leadership, this Administration and and a Democratic Congress supplied.

Government, no longer callous to suffering, moved swiftly to end distress, to halt depression, to secure more social and economic justice for all.

The very same men who must bear the responsibility for the inaction of those days, are the ones who now dare falsely to state that we are still in the depth of the depression into which they plunged us; that we have prevented the country from recovering, and that it is headed for the chaos of bankruptcy. They have even gone to the extent of stating that this Administration has not made one man a job.

I say that those statements are false. I say that the figures of employment, of production, of earnings, of general business activity—all prove that they are false.

The tears for the laboring man and woman now being shed in this campaign come from those same Republican leaders who had their chance to prove their love for labor in 1932—and missed it.

Recites Record of 1932

Back in 1932, these leaders were willing to let the workers starve if they could not get a job.

Back in 1932, they were not willing to guarantee collective bargaining.

Back in 1932, they met the demands of unemployed veterans with fire and troops.

Back in 1932, they raised their hands in horror at the thought of fixing a minimum wage or maximum hours for labor; they never gave one thought to such things as pensions for old age or insurance for the unemployed.

In 1940, eight years later, what a different tune is played by them! It is a tune played against a sounding board of election day. It is a tune with overtones which whisper: "Votes, votes, votes."

These same Republican leaders are for all the new progressive measures now, they believe in them. They believe in them so much, that they will never be happy until they can clasp them to their own chests and put their own brand upon them. If they could only get control of them, they plead, they would take so much better care of them, honest-to-goodness they would.

This tune is, of course, only a rehash of the tune of 1936. In that election year the affection of these Republican leaders for the laboring man also rose to a high pitch. But after election day they and their friends did all that they could in the Congress, before administrative bodies, and in the courts and in the press to beat these measures down into the ground.

What are the plain facts about employment today?

There are 9,000,000 more men and women employed in private industry now than were employed in March of 1933.

In the month of August of this year over 400,000 were added to private pay rolls. In September, another 500,000 workers went to work in our industries.

The millions that have gone to work and the other hundreds of thousands now going to work each month in private industry are the unequivocal answer to the brazen statement made by the Republicans in this campaign, that this Administration has not added one private job since 1933. This statement of theirs can only be branded as a deliberate misstatement of fact. And I now so brand it.

Let us call the roll of some of the specific improvements in the lot of the working men and women that have come about during the past eight years.

More than 42,000,000 employes are now members of the old-age-pension system. An additional 2,000,000 men and women, over 65 years of age, are now receiving cash grants each month.

Twenty-nine million employes have been brought under the protection of unemployment insurance.

Average Earnings at Peak

Collective bargaining has been guaranteed.

A minimum wage has been established.

A maximum work week of 40 hours has been fixed, with provisions for time and a half for overtime.

Child labor has been outlawed.

The average hourly earnings of factory workers were 56 cents in the boom year of 1929. In February, 1933, they had dropped to 45 cents. They are now 67 cents—not only higher than in 1933 but, mark you, nearly 11 cents per hour bigger than in 1929 itself.

Factory pay envelopes had fallen to $5,000,000,000 per year by 1929. In 1940, the factory pay rolls are running at the rate of $10,000,000,000.

And we must not forget that the cost of living is today 22 per cent lower than it was in 1929. That means something to the American family.

An equally unpardonable falsification about our economy is made when the Republican leaders talk about American business—how it cannot make a profit, how little confidence it has in this Administration, and how this Administration hates business.

We know, if we but look at the record, that American business, big and small business, is way up above the level of 1932, and on a much sounder footing than it was even in the twenties.

Do you need the figures to prove it?

Gives Income Figures

Our national income has nearly doubled since 1932, from $39,000,000,000 up to the rate of $74,000,000,000 in 1940. If you consider the lower cost of living today, the national income is even higher now than in the great boom year of 1929.

In the ten years before the crash in 1929, the years of the so-called prosperity boom, bank failures averaged over 600 a year. The number of bank failures last year was only 42. Ten of these were under Federal Deposit Insurance set up by this Administration, and in these ten banks 99 per cent of the depositors did not lose a dollar.

During this Administration the total number of bank failures for the entire seven years was less than the number of bank failures in any single one of the preceding ten years.

And yet there are some banks now using money to advertise, or to send letters to their depositors, hinting that unless this Administration is defeated, the deposits of their banks will be in danger. This is sheer intimidation to blackjack the election, and to return the financial control of the Government to the very forces which had nearly wrecked the nation.

Now as to corporation profits. They were a minus quantity in 1932. Corporations as a whole showed losses of almost $4,000,000,000 that year. By now, eight years later, that deficit has been wiped out, and corporations are reporting profits of $4,000,000,000 a year.

And yet they say this Administration prevents profits and stifles business.

If it is true that the New Deal is the enemy of business, and that the Republican leaders, who brought business to the brink of ruin in 1932, are the friends of business—then I can only say that American business should continue to be saved from its friends.

The output of our factories and mines is now almost 13 per cent greater than at the peak of 1929—1929, mind you, not 1932. It is at the highest level ever recorded.

We have passed the time when the prosperity of the Nation is measured in terms of the stock ticker. We know that the well being of a people is measured by the manner in which they live, by the security which they feel in the future.

For the American people as a whole—the great body of its citizens—the standard of living has increased well above that of 1929.

We do not advertise "a chicken in every pot" or "two cars in every garage." We know it is more important that the American people this year are building more homes, are buying more pairs of shoes, more washing machines, more electric refrigerators, more electric current, more textile products, than in the boom year of 1929.

This year there will be placed on the tables of America far more butter, more cheese, more meat, more canned goods—more food than in the luxurious year of 1929.

"I Had to Laugh"

Last Sunday morning I had to laugh when I read the following in the financial section of the New York Times—a paper which is reputed not to love me too much. This is what an editor of the financial page of the New York Times said: I quote, "the Federal Reserve Board in the week added another point to its index of production for September, and the figure now stands at 125, or 13½ per cent above the 1929 average"—mind you, not the 1932 average but the 1929 average. I quote further: "Dreams of business 'flat on its back' must come from smoking campaign cigars or else the speakers are talking about some other country."

Wouldn't it be nice if the editorial writers of The Times could get acquainted with their own business experts?

Every single man, woman and child has a vital interest in this recovery. But if it can be said to affect any single group more than any other, that group would be the young men and women of America.

It may be hard for some of you younger people to remember the dismal kind of world which the youth of America faced in 1932.

Tragedy Has Passed

The tragedy of those days has passed. There is today in the youth of the nation a new spirit, a new energy, a new conviction that a sounder and more stable economy is being built for them.

In 1940, this generation of American youth can truly feel that they have a real stake in their country.

Through the Civilian Conservation Corps and the National Youth Administration, millions of youth have benefited by training, and by education, and by jobs.

We propose in the interests of justice and in the interests of national defense, to broaden the work and extend the benefits of both these agencies. For they are a part of the lines of defense behind the first lines—training men and women for essential defense industries and for other industries! educating them to self-reliance—to moral resistance against that way of life which ignores the individual.

The one thing which must be extended if we would help the young men and women of the Nation is to give them the opportunity to work.

We have recognized that to the right to vote, to learn, to speak, to worship, we, your government, add the right to work.

We have that definite goal toward which we are aiming. We believe that if boys and girls on reaching employment age have been unable to get a job in private industry, the Government owes them the duty of furnishing them with the necessary training to equip them for employment. We are determined during the next four years to make our objective—work for every young man and woman in America—a living fact.

Tonight there is one more false charge—one outrageously false charge—made to strike terror into the hearts of our citizens. It is a charge that offends every political and religious conviction that I hold dear. It is the charge that this Administration wishes to lead this country into war.

This charge is contrary to every fact, every purpose of the past eight years. Throughout these years my every act and every thought has been directed to the end of preserving the peace of the world and, more particularly, the peace of the United States—the peace of the Western Hemisphere.

As I saw the war coming, I used every ounce of the prestige of the office of President of the United States to prevent its onset.

When war came, I used every ounce of the prestige of the office to prevent its spread to other nations. When that effort failed, I called upon the Congress, and I called upon the Nation, to build the strong defenses that would be our best guarantee of peace and security in this hemisphere.

To Republicans and Democrats, to every man, woman and child in the Nation I say—your President and your great Secretary of State are following the road to peace.

We are arming ourselves not for any foreign war.

We are arming ourselves not for any purpose of conquest or intervention in foreign disputes. I repeat again that I stand on the platform of our party; "we will not participate in foreign wars and we will not send our Army, naval or air forces to fight in foreign lands outside of the Americas except in case of attack."

It is for peace I have labored; and it is for peace I shall labor all the days of my life.

Hill Forecasts Roosevelt Sweep

The man who placed Roosevelt's name in nomination at Chicago, Senator Lister Hill, of Alabama, predicted here yesterday that Willkie would carry only two States as did former Gov. Alf M. 'Dictator' Shout in Movie Brings Man's Arrest

Atlanta, Oct. 23 (AP).—A shout of "dictator" in a local theater during the showing of President Roosevelt's picture in a news reel led to a disturbance that resulted today in a suspended jail term of 30 days or a $50 fine for a member of the audience.

Judge John Cone imposed the sentence in Recorder's Court on W. Clark Erwin, 27, who was charged with disorderly conduct. Lieut. Col. Jack Taylor, a member of Gov. E. D. Rivers' staff, testified Erwin booed and shouted "dictator" during the news reel.

300 N. Y. Police Guard Willkie

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—A special detail of more than 300 police was assigned to Wendell L. Willkie's motorcade and the four places at which the Republican Presidential candidate spoke in New York tonight.

The special detail was distributed at the points at which Willkie spoke as well as along his route through New York City.

velt said were statements of the Republican position. A thunderous five-minute ovation marked Mr. Roosevelt's appearance on the stage of the huge auditorium.

Assuming personal command of the Democratic campaign with obvious relish, the President smiled repeatedly as leather-lunged followers shouted up from the floor, "Give it to 'em, champ."

Never Names Willkie

Mr. Roosevelt did not mention Willkie by name at any point in his address, but repeatedly denounced "Republican leaders."

"I consider it a public duty to answer falsifications with facts," the President said. "I will not pretend that I find this an unpleasant duty. I am an old campaigner, and I love a good fight."

The address here tonight, pitched in fighting tempo, was heard by a crowd of 20,000, in Convention Hall, where Mr. Roosevelt was nominated in 1936 and Wendell Willkie, G. O. P. candidate, this year.

The President told his cheering audience that Republican leaders are guilty of "unpardonable falsification" when they say the Administration "prevents profits and stifles business."

He marshaled statistics showing the national income at $74,000,000,000 today, as compared with $39,000,000,000 in 1932. Corporation profits were "a minus quantity" in 1932, he stated, while they are now reported at $4,000,000,000. The Federal Reserve Board index of production stood at 125 for last month, against 111½ in September, 1929, he pointed out.

Enemy of Business?

"If it is true that the New Deal is the enemy of business, and that the Republican leaders who brought business to the brink of ruin in 1932 are the friends of business," Mr. Roosevelt continued "then I can only say that American business should continue to be saved from its friends."

Mr. Roosevelt charged the G. O. P. with importing into the campaign "certain techniques of propaganda, created and developed in dictator countries.

"It is the very simple technique," he said, "of repeating and repeating falsehoods, with the idea that by constant repetition and with no contradiction, the misstatements will finally come to be believed."

"Brazen" Republican charges that "this Administration has not made one man a job" are answered, the President said, by figures showing 9,000,000 more men and women at work today in private industry than in March, 1933.

The G. O. P. is now "shedding tears" for labor, but the same leaders had a chance to prove "their love for labor—and missed it," Mr. Roosevelt asserted.

Inspection of two key defense plants and a 25 mile open car tour through crowded streets on both sides of the Delaware River furnished the overture to the major campaign address.

Crowds estimated at more than 500,000 lined the well publicized route of the Presidential party through Philadelphia and Camden, N. J., urban centers at the heart of a two-State area which commands 52 electorial votes.

A wave of cheering, whistling and cowbell-clanging rolled along the President's route, which was lined with bunting and New Deal slogans.

Early today in a brief back platform appearance at Wilmington, Del., Mr. Roosevelt charged that spiritual successors of the Liberty League of 1936 are attempting today to deceive the American people.

In a frankly political talk the President asked the people of Delaware to give him "their votes on election day." While he spoke an airplane circled over the station, flying a "No Third Term" streamer.

At the New York Shipbuilding plant, in Camden, N. J., where part of America's "two ocean Navy" is under construction, the President told a cheering crowd of workers:

"These ships are being built not to go to war but to keep us at peace.

"They are not just on order," he said, "but are being built. Thanks to all you are doing, they are being built from four to six months ahead of schedule."

Another vast crowd of workers turned out at the Frankford Arsenal in Northeast Philadelphia, where the President said, "the more quickly the United States arms the more secure our peace will be."

Ammunition on View

Polished shell cases, bomb cases and a block-long row of cartridge boxes, labeled "one day's production of .30 caliber," were on view as the President drove through the grounds.

A third stop on the Philadelphia-Camden tour was at the Cramp Shipyards, where rusty equipment and shattered window panes dramatized two decades of idleness. The yards are to resume operations soon.

To reach the defense plants the President drove through streets gay with the uniforms of brass bands and campaign placards. In South Penn Square, by Philadelphia's City Hall, confetti and paper scraps floated down from office buildings to carpet the pavement.

Moving on through the industrial sections of Philadelphia and Camden, the President saw posters reading, "Youth Is for You, F. D. R." "Pennsylvania Needs Roosevelt" and "Win What With Willkie?" He heard bands and phonographs playing "God Bless America" and "Franklin D. Roosevelt Jones."

Guffey in Car

Sharing the back seat of a White House touring car with Mr. Roosevelt were Senator Guffy (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, and Jack Kelley, Democratic chairman for Philadelphia.

The President's six-minute speech at Wilmington was heard by a crowd of 10,000.

Mr. Roosevelt gave a back platform blessing to James M. Tunnell, Democratic candidate for the Senate, and Josiah Marvel, candidate for Governor.

Text of Roosevelt's Wilmington Speech

Aboard Roosevelt Train en Route to Philadelphia, Oct. 23.—The text of President Roosevelt's speech at Wilmington, Del., follows:

I remember well my visit to Wilmington during the election of 1936. Some of the political experts of those days were somewhat amused at my visit to Delaware in a political campaign. They told me that I certainly was optimistic if I thought that Delaware would go Democratic in that Presidential election.

They were surprised at the result of that election.

Four years ago Wilmington was the home town of the famous Liberty League. It was created for several purposes, but its major objective was to defeat the New Deal and drive it from office.

In view of that fact, I thought that Wilmington was a good place to read from a speech made by President Abraham Lincoln the definition which he gave of the word "liberty."

This year that definition is of even greater significance. This is what President Lincoln said:

The world has never had a good definition of the word liberty, and the American people just now are much in want of one. We all declare for liberty, but in using the same word we do not all mean the same thing. With some the word liberty may mean for each man to do as he pleases with himself and the products of his labor, while with others the same word may mean for some men to do as they please with other men, and the product of other men's labor. Here are two not only different but incompatible things called by the same name, liberty. And it follows that each of the things is, by the respective parties, called by two different and incompatible names—liberty and tyranny.

And then Abraham Lincoln used this example. He said:

The shepherd drives the wolf from the sheep's throat, for which the sheep thanks the shepherd as his liberator, while the wolf denounces him for the same act, as the destroyer of liberty. . . . Plainly, the sheep and the wolf are not agreed upon a definition of the word liberty; and precisely the same difference prevails today among us human creatures . . . and all professing to love liberty. Hence we behold the process by which thousands are daily passing from under the yoke of bondage hailed by some as the advance of liberty and bewailed by others as the destruction of all liberty.

And then Lincoln said this:

Recently, as it seems, the people . . . have been doing something to define liberty, and thanks to them that, in what they have done, the wolf's dictionary has been repudiated.

In 1936, the people of the United States took definite action to define what they intended liberty to mean in this country for the next four years. They repudiated the wolf's dictionary.

I am sure that this year the people not only of Delaware but of the United States, are all taking a renewed interest in that word "liberty." There are not so many countries left where the word has any real meaning.

I hope that by their votes on election day the people of the State of Delaware will reaffirm their own definition of "liberty"—the same definition they made four years ago.

Asylum In Ireland?

There is now a strong likelihood that tens of thousands of women and children from the bombed areas of England may soon find refuge in Ireland. Negotiations to arrange the details and conditions of these evacuations are now proceeding both as between London and Dublin and as between London and Belfast.

In a world torn by fanatic passions and implacable political hatreds it is interesting and heartening to note that the initiative in these negotiations was taken by a man who less than a quarter century ago was placed under sentence of death by British authorities—Premier de Valera of Eire.

It was the story of the sinking of the City of Benares and the terrible ordeal of her young survivors adrift in an open sea and sighted by the merest chance that appears to have moved Mr. de Valera to action. That tragedy pretty clearly illustrated the difficulties and hazards of attempting, at this stage of the war, to remove children to the North American continent. Meanwhile, the impossibility of obtaining guarantees of safe conduct has apparently brought to nothing the plan for fetching child refugees to the United States, in unarmed and unconvoyed American ships, as authorized under the Hennings Act.

Thus the proposed haven in Ireland for British war refugees seems a logical and quite satisfactory adjustment of what, after all, is one of the most serious and difficult of the British war problems. Of course there can be no permanent assurance that in Ireland the refugees will be much safer than in England. That is to say, Eire has escaped war or occupation, not so much because of her desperately cherished neutrality, as because Hitler and his generals have abandoned temporarily their notion of invading Britain. Whenever, and if ever, the invasion seems feasible, Ireland's position will become as perilous as it seemed last summer.

Nevertheless, civilized men and women will be rejoiced by Mr. de Valera's compassionate and magnanimous gesture.

Chance Plus Discretion

As the day for actual induction of young men into the Army for compulsory military training approaches, two characteristics of the draft stand out with increasing clarity. On one hand every precaution is being taken to adjust this compulsory service, so far as that is possible, to democratic concepts and practices. On the other hand, the registrants are to be carefully sifted so as to produce a strong and virile military reserve.

Elaborate preparations have been made to insure the accidental selection of numbers that will designate the men to be drafted in each local area. Military training and combat service, if that becomes necessary, have been recognized as an inescapable obligation of citizenship. So all of the Nation's young men within the age limits of 21 to 35 have been grouped into one general category. Since only a fraction of these men will be needed for actual training and service, however, they are to be chosen by a carefully guarded lottery system.

It is doubtful whether a more democratic method of selecting trainees in a hurry could be devised. Class distinctions are totally obliterated. A single capsule to be drawn by chance from a vast number of identical capsules containing draft numbers may designate for service young men from both mansions and hovels. That factor alone has won for the conscription system confidence and good will which otherwise might not have been attained.

Reliance upon this element of chance has been possible only because of the large groups from which selections will be made. An efficient army could not be built by mere haphazard drafting of men from civilian life. So extraordinary precautions are also being made to see that only the physically, mentally and morally fit are finally inducted into the service.

When chance has played its part science and common sense will step in to correct the errors of chance. Men with dependents will be eliminated. And men who cannot be developed into strong, competent soldiers will be weeded out by exacting physical examinations.

The first consideration is that the draft shall serve our national defense needs. Within this general framework, it should now be apparent to everyone that the Government is distributing the burden of military service in the fairest and most equitable manner. That is a happy augury for the country's first experiment in peacetime conscription.

Spotlight On Vichy

The plight in which the French people find themselves as a result of their nation's military defeat and the blackout of French liberties which followed that catastrophe has aroused the deepest sympathies of the civilized world.

Certainly the solid bonds of friendship which for so long have existed between the people of France and those of the United States have not been broken as a result of the tragic developments of the last months. Americans grieve for France and fervently hope that the nation we knew and loved will speedily be restored and become once again, what she was for so many centuries, a citadel of culture and civilization.

To understand, says an old French proverb, is to forgive. Because France, in the graphic words of Marshal Petain, is a nation with a rope around its neck, its freedom of action is severely limited. This the American people fully realize. It would thus not surprise them and will produce no anger, except against France's jailers, if the country is driven further along the hard road of captivity, if her harassed people are forced to do things which they find distasteful.

It would be monstrous, however, if in the hope of a temporary and factitious easing of the fetters which now bind Frenchmen, the present leaders of France should so completely make themselves the slaves of Hitler's will as to agree in any measure to cooperate with him against France's erstwhile ally.

It is only in the prospect of an ultimate British victory that France's hope for salvation lies. To diminish the possibility of such a victory by deliberate action would be a loathsome betrayal of France.

The recent meeting of Chancellor Hitler and Vice Premier Laval has set in motion a host of ominous rumors. The least credible is that, in return for an easing of the armistice terms, France will join Germany in the attack against Great Britain. Such an agreement would be an invitation to civil disorder. The overwhelming majority of the French people cannot want Britain defeated. They must pray for her ultimate victory.

But there are other arrangements which the Vichy government might make with the Third Reich which, while preserving the present status of unoccupied France, would, nonetheless, make the latter an ally of the Axis. And these arrangements could be made without the knowledge or consent of the French people. There might be, for instance, a deal involving the possible use of the French fleet by Germany and Italy or the transformation of the French colonies in North Africa and the French mandated areas in the Near East into military, naval and air bases for the Axis.

Such arrangements would be destructive of France. And if the Vichy government agreed to them it would stand condemned before the world as a regime faithless to the interests of the nation it presumably serves, faithless to civilization as well.

The spotlight is on Vichy. Its position is admittedly difficult. While surrender to superior force is not a crime, active cooperation with the instruments of evil would be a crime, and would be so considered by the civilized world.

Regardless of the pressures on Vichy by Hitler and Mussolini, the rumors that France is about to undertake active cooperation with the Axis are difficult to believe.

A Chinese Artist

Nearly everybody is familiar with Blake's famous apostrophe to his tiger—

> What immortal hand or eye
> Could frame thy fearful symmetry?

It is true, of course, that Chang Shan-tze, who died last Sunday at Chungking, could not create a tiger. But with his paint brushes he could reproduce tigers that were as symmetrical, ferocious and beautiful as the fastidious Blake could have desired. Indeed, Prof. Chang was one of the most famous of all tiger painters. This, however, is scarcely an overcrowded field, since there are certain inconveniences connected with painting tigers from live models.

The most interesting thing about Prof. Chang's life—and there was much of interest in it besides art, for he had also been a soldier and a revolutionist—is the contribution he made to Christian religious art. Following his conversion to Roman Catholicism, the brush which had been reserved for subjects that were beautiful, animal and ruthless turned to subjects that were spiritual and sublime. Among the results were his representations of "The Good Shepherd" and "The Ascension" now at Fordham University in New York. These, painted without perspectives in the classical Chinese manner, and wholly Oriental in feeling, have, nevertheless, an irresistible tenderness and beauty.

Those who have regretted the static and stereotyped nature of most religious art of the past two centuries will also regret that Prof. Chang did not live to continue his work in this field. His death at the age of 62 was undoubtedly hastened by his incessant labors in behalf of his unhappy country. It was for the sake of Chinese freedom that he traveled from place to place through Europe and then America exhibiting his pictures to raise money for the armies of Chiang Kai-shek. His genius unquestionably won many friends to that cause.

Mr. Roosevelt Replies

President Roosevelt's first real campaign speech this year, delivered in Philadelphia last night, was a reply to what he termed "the more fantastic misstatements" made by his opponents. The President took great delight in refuting some extravagant charges directed at his Administration. His effective denials again illustrate the weakness of overstatement in any political campaign.

It is especially reassuring to have the President state, with proper emphasis, that the United States has no secret treaty, commitment or understanding with any foreign power. The Administration is following a positive and courageous foreign policy. Its action in extending aid to Great Britain and in withholding various war materials from Japan has the support of an overwhelming majority of the American people.

Yet the public wants to know every step the Government takes in this critical period. The President's forthright statement will help to allay fears that the public has not been fully taken into the confidence of the Administration on questions of foreign policy.

Mr. Roosevelt was much less impressive when he attempted to show that his Administration has brought back prosperity. In this part of his address he tried to fight the 1932 campaign all over again. The President seemed to forget that eight years have passed since he defeated the Hoover Administration on the depression issue. In the meantime, the Republican Party has acquired new leadership. And one present issue is the failure of the Administration to redeem its 1932 promises. Surely the President does not expect to win a third term on the strength of the now irrelevant arguments used in his first campaign.

The strongest argument which the President made in defense of his recovery efforts was that in some respects the peak of prosperity attained in 1929 has been surpassed. At best that is an extremely weak claim in a Nation so addicted to the habits of growth and progress as the United States has been through most of its history. The President spoke of the "luxurious year of 1929." It seems luxurious, of course, only because economic progress in the last decade has been nil.

The President rightly claims credit for social security legislation, for guaranteeing labor the right to bargain collectively and many other desirable reforms. The fatal weakness in this appeal for votes is that his Administration has never demonstrated ability to pay for the benefits, grants-in-aid and subsidies extended to many groups in recent years. His Administration has gone heavily into debt for these luxuries, and it has shown no indication whatever that it can arrest the present accelerated drift toward bankruptcy.

Since the President set out to correct misleading statements of his opponents, moreover, it is strange that he should point to the current rise in employment and industrial activity without even acknowledging the influence of the defense program. Mr. Roosevelt knows that it is chiefly the outpouring of Federal funds for arms and munitions which is stimulating industry at present. But for political purposes he prefers to leave the impression that these gains reflect a revival of prosperity for which the New Deal is entitled to claim credit.

It is unquestionably true, as Mr. Roosevelt says, that "the Presidency is a most sacred trust." Likewise, "it ought not to be dealt with on any level other than an appeal to reason and to humanity." The weakness of this commendable theme is that the President so frequently fails to measure up to the principle he prescribes.

No Wonder He Canceled

From the Memphis Commercial Appeal.

Vladimir Horowitz, celebrated pianist, canceled a Newark concert date recently, and the sponsors released the following explanation from three physicians:

> We have under our care Mr. Vladimir Horowitz, who is convalescing from a traumatic tenosynovitis of the flexor digitorum sublimis and profundis muscle at the metacarpophalangeal joint. He is constantly improving, but it is our opinion that he needs further medical management.

On being translated with the aid of a medical dictionary this turns out to mean that Mr. Horowitz had hurt a finger. It also reminds us to wonder again why medical reports, laws, lawyers' briefs and such like could not just as well be written in plain English. Mr. Horowitz is far more likely to pay a large bill after reading the foregoing than he would be if the doctors had blurted out, "The guy's got a sore finger," but that doesn't satisfy us.

D. C. Tax Exemptions

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I notice in the second section of the issue of The Post of October 10 an article under the title "House Exempts HOLC Building From D. C. Tax." In this article you state that the District Commissioners are now engaged in another dispute with the officers of the Federal Reserve Bank whether its building on Constitution Avenue should be exempt from local taxation on the grounds that it is a Government structure. You further state that taxes, back and current, amount to $2,985. This appears to be a very small tax.

Is it true that the corporation counsel's office and the courts and the Commissioners have already ruled that the Federal Reserve Bank must pay taxes, since it is a corporate body apart from the Federal Government?

We, the people of the District of Columbia, are becoming more and more stepchildren, or sheep without a shepherd, each day. The taxpayers of the District ought to receive benefits equal to those enjoyed by the taxpayers of our respective States. Why should the House ignore our rights and cancel a $162,000 debt of the Home Owners Loan Association in taxes which rightfully should be paid in the same manner that the Home Owners Loan Corporation pays taxes on its real property in the various States in which it has property? Of course, if the House should appropriate $162,000 from the Federal Treasury to reimburse the District of Columbia tax account for a like sum, we would have no right to protest.

The taxes which are rightfully due and payable to the District of Columbia for real property owned by separate corporations apart from the Federal Government, on which taxes are not being paid, should be sufficient income to more than offset the cost of the extra personnel essential for self-government operation for the District of Columbia.

Pegler Again

Distressed

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am distressed over my mental condition. Last night I listened to Col. Lindbergh's address and could get nothing out of it—other, of course, than that he objects to the present leadership. But as either prospective leadership will carry out the same foreign policy, the only deduction I could make is that we should have the colonel lead us.

I began with the postman. Alas, he said, "Sorry, Ma'am, I never listen to him." I shouted across the street to Mr. S on his way to work and repeated my question. He said, "Didn't listen." I took my problem to the store with me and asked all and sundry. The reply was the same. They had not listened!

Might I suggest that it would be far better if no one answers Col. Lindbergh at all? He loves privacy, detests the limelight, pleads to be allowed to lead his own life, and so far I have found no one who listened anyhow! Apparently I had the air wave all to myself.

Giant Men

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Remember the parades on Thanksgiving and before Christmas. Little children looked on in awe at the enormous figures. But you merely laughed, because you knew that the giant figures were merely normal men with grotesque costumes.

But when it comes to politics, you are told about giant men, and you stand in awe.

Candidate Roosevelt is far from the towering creature his publicity men would have us believe. He is a normal man, and every normal man can be replaced.

Change Chefs?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We, the people, own the finest restaurant (country) in the world—we are the stockholders. In the kitchen we have a "chef" who has had years of experience on the same job and has come to know the likes and dislikes of his patrons as only experience can teach.

He has a kitchen crew such as baker, butcher, salad girl, dishwasher, bus boy and all the other help necessary in the successful operation of a kitchen. Each one knows his department and makes it function properly.

Other restaurants (countries) have failed because of powerful competition and as a consequence have been taken over by their competitors. This competitor would use any means to wreck our business so that he could take over this beautiful restaurant, with all of its natural resources and new progressive equipment!

We admit that we've had a few minor disputes with the kitchen, such as when the egg was a little too hard or when the toast was scorched—however, our restaurant is still operating and we are all mighty glad that it is.

Now, suppose a few of the stockholders decide to fire the chef, the butcher, the baker and the other help and put in an entirely inexperienced crew. Would that be wise in the face of such strong dirty competition in the world today? Especially when the new "Chef" says he likes the way the old chef cooks his eggs, toast and coffee except that he, the new one, could cook them better? I, as a stockholder, wouldn't want to take that risk.

So, Mr. Editor, let's keep Mr. Roosevelt as our Chef and see if perhaps we can't find an important job in the kitchen for Mr. Willkie? He should make an excellent Secretary of Commerce, since he has had experience along this line, but to take charge of the kitchen and improve on it—never! At least not at this time. J. E. B.
Takoma Park, Md., Oct. 17.

From The 17th Century

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In view of the present contest for the highest national office in this critical period of our world history, in which the chief issue is not the third term but which of the candidates is best fitted to conduct the foreign relations of our country, the following observations of Charles Davenant, a leading seventeenth century English publicist, are very interesting:

"A Man can be no more born a Statesman than a Physician, or a Lawyer; and let the mind be never so happily dispos'd, time must ripen what is begot by Nature.

"Mr. Hobbes says, He that has most Experience in any kind of Business, has most signs to guess at the future time; and consequently is the most Prudent: And so much more Prudent than he that is new in that kind of Business, as not to be equall'd by any Advantage of Natural or Extemporary Wit.

"The Sanguine Hopes conceived by Young Men are by no means proper in Weighty and great Deliberations, and they seldom make good States-men; Elder Years, where they produce not Wisdom, bring at least Caution, which is something like it.

"They who have seen much are use'd to frequent Disappointments, and therefore not inclin'd to venture; especially they rarely hazard the summ of affairs upon any single Council."

ARTHUR LEON HORNIKER.

Discuss Vice Presidential Candidate

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: So far as I know, a great and serious danger to the country in the re-election of Franklin D. Roosevelt seems to have been overlooked—the situation if he were to die and be succeeded by his chosen running mate, Mr. Wallace.

If we consider the history of the Presidents elected during the past 100 years, and of the Vice Presidents who have been elected President for the following term, startling facts are presented.

All of the first eight Presidents, ending with Van Buren, survived their terms, three of four years, five of eight. Beginning with William Henry Harrison, inaugurated in 1841, and eliminating the Vice Presidents who have not been elected President, only 19 individuals have been elected President. Of these, Grant and Wilson are the only ones who survived two full terms. Wilson had a complete breakdown five months before the end of the eighth year. Franklin D. Roosevelt would have to be reelected to fill out eight years. Cleveland, while elected for a second term, had four years of comparative rest.

Three of the Presidents died of natural causes: William Henry Harrison after a few weeks in office, in 1841; Taylor, after a few months, in 1850; Harding, after two years and a few months, in 1923. Three Presidents were assassinated—Lincoln, a few weeks after his second inauguration; Garfield a few months after his; McKinley, a few months after his second.

Thus of the 19, six have died, one has succumbed; more than one in three, an alarming proportion. Most of the Presidents have not lived long after a second term, whether by succession or election.

In the coming years the burden and responsibility of the office will be far greater than ever before. It is inconceivable that the health of the President has not been impaired by nearly eight years of the most exhausting of tasks, despite his gallantry and fortitude. On the other hand, Mr. Willkie is a man of great vigor, in his prime, fully capable of carrying through for four years. Should he not, the future would be safe. Senator McNary is one of the ablest and best qualified men in the country.

Let anyone who is considering a vote in favor of a third term pause and reflect upon the situation, by no means unlikely to arise, if Mr. Wallace should become President.

The Eloquent Bum

Uncle Joel Bonnett's system of making a living never failed him. He stayed fat until he was 82 and he had more fun out of life than any man I ever knew. And he did less work. But it was Uncle Joel's glibness that kept the horn of plenty overflowing into his personal bin—not his system.

He lived in those lazy days before the World War and he seldom ventured out of his native State of Alabama. He said this was because he loved his friends and he didn't know anyone outside of the State.

Uncle Joel was a bum, but an eloquent one. He could talk just about anybody into anything and this included the Governor and Mr. Tom Boggs, who ran the livery stable.

Mr. Tom Boggs and the livery stable figured prominently in Uncle Joel's life. In fact, he couldn't operate without them, for this was the way he worked:

He'd borrow one of Mr. Tom's buggies, get one of the boys to hitch him up a horse and set out for the country.

He'd ride along until he saw a farmer in a field, say, gathering some corn.

"Whoa!" Uncle Joel would yell to the horse.

"Morning, son!" he'd yell to the farmer.

Uncle Joel would then climb out of the buggy, hitch the horse on the side of the road and walk over to the farmer.

"Young man," he'd say, no matter whether the farmer was 20 or 60, "what was your father's name?"

The farmer would tell him.

"Well, sir," Uncle Joel would say, entering the field, "I'm certainly pleased to shake your hand."

Uncle Joel would shake and pump.

"Yes, sir," he'd go on, "I'm certainly pleased to see you and to know that the son of old Jim Beck grew up to grow corn like this. Why, this is one of the finest stands of corn I've ever seen, young man."

With this Uncle Joel would commence raking in the ears of corn, talking all the time, while the farmer would stand by, often in open-mouthed amazement.

Uncle Joel would talk on and on about the farmer's father and before he'd exhausted his stack of adjectives he'd have a croker sack full of what he called roastin' ears.

"Young man," he said, "I'm going to take this corn home and show it to my wife and the first chance I get I'm going to show it to the Governor. I'm going to tell them how proud I am of you. Good day, young man."

Uncle Joel would throw his sack of corn into the buggy and be off down the road, smiling and bowing and waving to the farmer.

He'd work the same line right through the county, picking up sweet potatoes, string beans, butter beans, watermelons, squash and everything else he could get his hands on.

The system most always worked. Sometimes the farmer would be a man Uncle Joel had worked two or three times before and maybe he wouldn't like it.

Uncle Joel would then affect wounded feelings.

"All right, young man," he'd say, "if you want to treat one of your father's old friends like this—if you want' to deny a few roastin' ears to a veteran of the struggle for Southern independence, then let me not raise a word against it."

After these trips through the lush lands of Alabama, Uncle Joel would return to Mr. Bogg's livery stable and pay Mr. Tom off in produce for the hire of the horse. It was an agreeable deal for Mr. Tom and he never complained but once. He said he was getting too much squash and too little of anything else. (Uncle Joel didn't like squash.)

Uncle Joel would take the bulk of his take to his home and then take the rest to the State Capitol. On intimate terms with every Governor, he'd march into his offices and deposit the produce on the desk of the executive.

"A young farmer friend of mine," Uncle Joel would say, "sent you this fine corn as a present, Excellency. All I ask is that you write him a letter of thanks."

That was Uncle Joel's follow up, and in those days a letter from a Governor was worth a half bushel of corn.

After Uncle Joel reached his late 70's he stopped his trips through the country and devoted his talents to amusing visitors to the Capitol. He became a guide. He did this by talking the chief of police into giving him a policeman's cap minus the insignia. That was his uniform. It was while he was amusing himself as a guide that Uncle Joel performed the feat that won him a State job for the rest of his life. I never knew what he did, but he got paid regularly.

One morning a delegation of young ladies from the Talladega School for the Hard of Hearing arrived at the capitol to be shown the sights of the ancient building. Uncle Joel took them in tow and he brought them around to the office of the secretary of state.

Uncle Joel stepped into the secretary's private office.

"Mr. Secretary," he said, "there are some very beautiful Alabama college girls outside who want to meet you."

The secretary got to his feet, adjusted his tie, tugged at his white silk vest and said sonorously to bring them in.

Uncle Joel did.

"Ladies," he began, "turning away from them so they couldn't read his lips, "it gives me great pleasure to introduce to you, the Hon. ——— ———, secretary of state of the sovereign State of Alabama, but better known to his many friends and admirers as the studhorse of the canebrake."

The secretary's great face became livid.

"Where," he screamed, "is my gun? I'll kill that man."

Uncle Joel retreated behind the smiling young ladies, who hadn't heard a word of the exchange.

Uncle Joel stayed away from the Statehouse until the secretary's subsequent defeat at the polls. Then he came back to glory and a job for life.

As I said, he was an eloquent bum. ARTHUR ALLEN.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Whale, The Elephant, And The Eagle

MANY WHO HEARD what the associate editor of Aero Digest, Mr. Cy Caldwell, had to say at the Herald Tribune Forum about organizing an independent air force will feel that in this old dispute, which goes back to the days of Gen. Mitchell, the argument of the airmen has not yet been squarely met or conclusively answered. Obviously it is not a question on which an ordinary newspaper writer could presume to reach a definite conclusion. Nevertheless, it is not a dispute which "the experts" can settle. For it is the experts themselves who disagree, the sailors and the soldiers being on the whole opposed to an independent force, the airmen on the whole in favor.

In the end a dispute of this sort has to be settled by the responsible civilian authorities and by the President as commander-in-chief of all the armed forces. The lay public cannot settle a question of this sort. But the public can insist that the case of the airmen be examined thoroughly and with an open mind.

THE ORDINARY objections to the establishment of an independent air force are, it seems to me, beside the point. It is argued that airplanes are as indispensable a part of the equipment of the Navy as are the submarines, as indispensable a part of the Army as the artillery, and that, therefore, the Navy must command the naval aviation and the Army must command the Army aviation. Mr. Caldwell made it very clear that the airmen for whom he speaks recognize this and have no idea of wishing to deprive the Navy or the Army of the planes they need, or to interfere with their command over their own aviation. The airmen are arguing that in addition to the planes which are auxiliaries of the Navy and the Army, there should be an independent air force organized under its own command and responsible to a Secretary of Air.

Their argument rests on the conviction, which they hold deeply, that just as sailors alone can develop the full potentialities of a navy, just as soldiers alone can develop the full potentialities of an army, so airmen alone, men who are air-minded, can develop the full potentialities of the still undeveloped art of aerial warfare. For my own part, I have yet to hear a satisfactory answer to this argument.

IT IS NOT a satisfactory answer to say that the admiral must command his planes as he commands his submarines and the general his planes as he commands his artillery. No one denies this. No one, likewise, denies that the Navy needs a little army of its own, the Marines, for missions which are primarily naval operations though they require soldiers. But no one would argue that because the Navy has a little army, there should not also be an independent Army commanded by soldiers. There are ships in the Army and there are soldiers in the Navy, and they are indeed auxiliaries. But if soldiers were regarded only as auxiliaries of the Navy, would there ever be much of an Army?

The very fact that the Navy and Army regard aviation as an auxiliary is strong evidence, amounting almost to proof, that they are not likely to think of aviation as a major arm in war. The Navy, quite rightly, regards aviation as auxiliary to the Navy's mission to command the seas. The Army, quite rightly, regards aviation as auxiliary to its mission, which is to command the land. Is there not then a very strong presumption that there should be an independent and coordinate service which has the mission to command the air?

THE PRESUMPTION is so strong that it can not safely be dismissed without sober consideration. We must not be put off by the exaggerations of the debate or the rather unrestrained language which makes aviation enthusiasts often sound fanatical. The merits of the argument and not the merits of the debaters is what matters.

So we may agree, I think, that the air men overstate their case, and injure it, when they contend that the air force is always the predominant arm in modern war. The Polish and the French campaigns, which they often cite, support the contentions of the generals that in land warfare aviation must be as much a part of the unified force of the army as the artillery and the tanks. These campaigns prove the critical importance of aviation but they do not prove, quite the contrary in fact, the case for an independent air force.

But all campaigns are not alike. Is it not being demonstrated in the present phase of the war between Germany and Britain that a situation can arise where the air force is the principal arm of offense and defense, with the navy and army playing auxiliary roles. And is it not significant for us that this should be the case now that the war has entered a phase where the struggle is between Germany, a land power, and Britain, a sea power? But for aviation the war today would be like the legendary battle between the whale and the elephant: neither could strike at the other until the eagles were called into the battle. The air became the battlefield when Germany could not use her army against Britain and Britain could not strike with her navy at Germany.

WHEN WAR TAKES this form, is it not self-evident that the commanders of the campaign should be men who have spent their whole lives thinking about the strategy and the tactics of aerial warfare rather than men who are accustomed to thinking of airplanes as flying scouts and flying artillery. Surely our experience of human nature tells us that the utmost potentiality of a new weapon is not likely to be developed by men who think of it as an auxiliary to the older weapons. Surely it is better to encourage the airmen, even if they claim too much, than to throttle them down under men who are preoccupied elsewhere, are specialized in a different direction, and are, therefore, disposed to believe too little.

For the United States in its present position there are compelling reasons why nothing should be neglected which might develop quickly, not merely the quantity of planes, but a formidable air power. The area which we have to defend is enormous. If we stood alone in the world, we would not have for many years a Navy great enough to defend what we must defend. Much of the region we must defend cannot be reached by an Army quickly enough to be decisive. Only an Air Force has the range, the mobility, and the offensive power to compensate for the insufficiency of the one-ocean Navy and the extreme slowness with which an Army can be brought into action. Must we not ask ourselves, then, whether we can afford not to listen to the airmen who say that an Air Force to be all that it might be, it must be planned and commanded by airmen?

Clarifying The Record

I HAVE to take this day out to set the dear feelings of two of my colleagues who protest that they were misrepresented by my interpretation of a circular which they distributed to members of the New York Newspaper Guild. These two are George Britt, of the World-Telegram, and Lewis Gannett, of the Herald Tribune. Among others, they signed an appeal to their fellow members to turn out for meetings and to insist that the delegates to the representative assembly also attend regularly, to prevent "unrepresentative" decisions.

Just as all of us, until a few years ago, referred to venereal maladies as "social" diseases, there are still those in the labor movement who refuse to call Communism by name, and Mr. Gannett is one of them. Mr. Britt has his naughty moments when he will call a bolo in private, but he is still too bashful to use such words in public, and that is the cause of our little trouble.

THE PAIR of them sent me a long telegram claiming that I misused their appeal to support my charge that the guild is rotten with Communism. Gannett says he has never identified as communism the influence which has created a crisis within the guild, driven out many American members and caused the establishment of new, rival unions of journalists under charters from the A. F. of L.

That is right. He never did so identify this influence, and I never said he did. I never said Britt so identified it, although he did. I so identified this influence on my own responsibility, and I also take responsibility for dividing the guild into two elements, the Americans and the Muscovites.

But when Britt and Gannett collaborated in their telegram of protest, Britt withheld from Gannett the fact that he (Britt) in a private telephone conversation with me did, distinctly and without reservation, identify the guild's internal enemy as the Communist element. Gannett seemed surprised when I told him that Britt had done this. Britt then admitted that he had identified Communism as the evil influence and had resented the guild's adherence to the Moscow party line in voting against conscription in a trick meeting. He insisted, however, that he had been unguarded and had not thoroughly covered the subject. But he admitted that I did not hurry him in this original discussion and that he had had an opportunity to express any reservations which he might have had in mind.

MY PURPOSE in phoning Britt, in the first place, was twofold. First, I wanted to make sure that he and Gannett had signed the appeal—in other words, that it was not a fake. I also wanted to ask Britt, as one of the signatories and a man of position in New York journalism and the guild, if he believed the Communists were responsible for the crisis mentioned in the appeal.

Britt flatly expressed this belief with no discount. Three times he said the Communists were responsible for the unrepresentative vote against conscription, using the term "party line" each time. I asked these questions to ascertain whether a prominent non-Communist in the guild now agreed with my contention that the Communists wield control. He thus confirmed my own conviction, but it was agreed that he would not be quoted, and he wasn't.

But when he demanded that I "clarify" the record, he wanted to conceal that part of the record which he had already concealed from Gannett. To this I replied with equal insistence that we must deal with all of the record.

He has finally agreed to this, and that is how it comes that I am able now to reveal our private discussion which fortified my own conviction that Communism was the guild's trouble. Now, by way of reservation, he wants to say that there are others than Communists who disbelieve in conscription and to repudiate the distinction between Americans and Muscovites—which never was attributed to him, anyway. That distinction is my own and I don't want to share it with anyone. I think it is pretty good, and I know it drives the bolos crazy.

I BELIEVE this does clarify the record except on one point.

The appeal, admitting "disaffection" in the guild, said the workers on the Chicago Herald-American voted, 4 to 1, to be represented by a "company-sponsored" union. I asked both of these men how they dared smear this legitimate 4-to-1 choice as a "company-sponsored" union.

The Herald-American people repudiated the guild in rebellion against that which Britt identified as Communist control and adherence to the Moscow party line.

The phrase "company-sponsored" conveys the suggestion that these journalists are rats, scabs and finks, in the polite language of the guild. It indicates the actual degree of respect for the free choice of free men which exists in the Newspaper Guild when any decision goes against it.

Campaign Round-Up

Off Franklin D. I am, alas!
He won't come out for cheaper gas;
My aid he very flatly throttles—
He won't cry "Back to beer in bottles!"
For him my spirit no more fizzes—
He will not limit air-wave quizzes!

To Willkie I distribute cusses—
He takes no stand for seats in buses;
I put him with the timid creatures—
He has no plank, "No double features!"
I'd vote for him and be quite keen, oh,
If he would put a curb on Screeno!

For Roosevelt I am now quite "offy"—
He takes no stand on lunchroom coffee;
He is no candidate for me—
He has no "hamburg" policy;
With me he'll have more downs than ups
Till he comes out 'gainst paper cups.

I was for Willkie; now I'm not—
He leads no fight for all-hots hot!
He will not come out yes-or-no
For new gags on the radio;
He will not march right out and get us
With "Sandwiches with far less lettuce!"

I was for F. D. R. but he Will not oppose all tea-ball tea;
He will not tell the public, "I Am for some hen in chicken pie;"
He will not take that step so risky
And call for fewer brands of whisky.

All Wendell's virtues are but shams—
He won't end singing telegrams;
He will not give his views upon
Those kiddie talks by Uncle Don;
He will not work with voice and brain
For fewer things in "cellophane."

Summary

I think it hard to make a choice;
Although they both are in fine voice
They dodge the greatest issue: that's "How do you stand on women's hats?"

Bygone Elections

Rough Rider Runs Again

HAVING made Taft President in 1908, Theodore Roosevelt pursued a course which sent the Republican Party down to defeat in 1912.

Woodrow Wilson

Taft and Roosevelt became the central figures in a furious contest. Theodore Roosevelt was strong, domineering and enjoyed great popularity.

War on Taft was declared by Roosevelt followers as soon as the President named his Cabinet. Roosevelt and Taft were in continual correspondence without a sign of discord between them. Yet the former President never rebuked his partisans or denied untrue accusations against Taft.

WHEN THE Republican National Convention met in Chicago on June 18, 1912, Taft's supporters, known as the Old Guard, were in control. The contest for nomination was between Taft and Senator Robert M. La Follette, of Wisconsin, nominated in the usual way and Roosevelt, whose name had not been presented. Taft won on the first ballot, although 344 delegates did not vote. James S. Sherman, of New York, was chosen for Vice President. Sherman died on October 30 and Nicholas Murray Butler was named in his place.

Immediately the Roosevelt supporters formed the Progressive Party led by him. Hiram Johnson, then Governor of California and now Senator, was named to run for Vice President.

When the Democrats met in Baltimore on June 25 there occurred the famous fight between Champ Clark, of Missouri, Speaker of the House, and Woodrow Wilson, Governor of New Jersey. Wilson won on the forty-sixth ballot. Thomas R. Marshall, of Indiana, was his running mate.

Wilson won 435 electoral votes to 88 for Roosevelt and 8 for Taft.

Books And Things

By John Patton

The Artist's Struggle

IT IS, apparently, the relentless force of genius which is the "Tiger Tiger," as interpreted from the William Blake poem to be the title of Max White's novel (Duell, Sloan & Pearce, $2.75). And this story of a painter's development is a strangely interesting record both of the demands of genius and of its discipline. I say "strangely interesting" because the long chronicle of John Martin's career is concentrated to the point of being actually technical, and holds the reader absorbed nevertheless. It demands for a fictional character whose pictures never can be seen the attention which the reader would give to the story of, say, Goya or Van Gogh; and gets it.

John Martin had been drawing pictures in a Ninth Avenue tenement since he was 4; at 18 he was a practiced painter whose skill could parody the academicians even as his own originality was arousing their scorn. But a rich old lady sensed the promise of his queer work and sent him to Paris to study. There, as in New York, he followed his own dictates rather than those of the teachers; but he worked all the time. His personal life was important only as an adjunct to his work: observation, experience, selection, trial and error. He loved Paris, enjoyed the people about him, felt at home as he had never felt in New York; Paris was a good place to work, a good life to work in.

His mistress meant something to him, his studio more, what he could see and ponder over meant most of all. He drew without models. But when he looked at an old beggar woman, for instance, he felt that he would be making a beginning in what he wanted to do if he could "paint just what he saw and add nothing to any gesture nor put down what was not there before any eye to see, yet include all that was human and frail and resisting in her, her lawlessness and her knowledge that was banal and meaningful." He was interested in the relation between appearance and reality; but when someone told him that he had "got the soul" into a portrait he painted out the whole thing, in rage. He wanted—how could he ever say what it was? Nobody knew what he was talking about. Everybody said his work was not only hideously ugly, but disappointing, impossible. But he had to go on in his own way. In his own way, and not otherwise, he wanted to be the best damn painter in the world.

It was in Madrid, where he went to stay with his Spanish father's family, that he first found great joy in his painting. Life in Paris had been sweeter, but in Spain his art reached maturity. When he went back to Paris people were beginning to dare to buy his work. Yet when he came home to New York he was looked upon as worthless. The novel tells how he conquered fame, of course. But it is the fight, not the vision or achievement of success, that makes the story.

And the force of the story—the thing that grips the reader's mind—lies in the presentation of the artist's response to life in art's values. John Martin is observant and sensitive and what he observes and feels goes, of necessity, into painting. There is, of course, a story here, with events and minor characters and an unusual heroine. But the vigor and consistency of the portrait of man-as-artist makes the book.

One Voter's Stand

By Mark Sullivan

Dorothy Thompson's Reasons

BECAUSE it is a convenient way to clarify this election; because it brings out the two fundamental issues; because it illustrates the bedeviling conflict between those issues; because it shows vividly the tragic dilemma which faces every American voter—for these reasons I use as a text the position taken by one voter, who happens also to be a writer, Columnist Dorothy Thompson.

Miss Thompson, as she makes her decision, knows that President Roosevelt has caused apprehension among persons having a concern for preservation of the American form of government. She has said so, vigorously. At various times during Mr. Roosevelt's second term Miss Thompson has written:

"The President demonstrated early in his first Administration that he conceives of the Presidency in terms of personal dictation."

"THE PRESIDENT'S philosophy is not a means for preventing a revolution. It is a means for making it . . . It is incompatible with the principles upon which this country was founded and it is incompatible with human freedom."

"These bills . . . add up to a consistent picture. The picture is of a tremendously centralized Government, with a power and authority vested in the President not far from equal to the power and authority vested in Mussolini or in Stalin . . . the independence of the States is to become the independence of local Soviets . . ."

Those are reasons why, under Mr. Roosevelt as President, many have felt that the American form of government is threatened. While it is three years since Miss Thompson set down these reasons, hardly anyone will deny that the reasons continue to exist. To do that would be one of the commonest of human fallacies; it would be to suppose that men's natures change. On the contrary, in this case, the disposition of Mr. Roosevelt to press toward change is at once proved and increased by his running for a third term.

THOSE ARE reasons why, from the standpoint of an American voter, concerned about his Government and his country, Mr. Roosevelt should not be reelected.

Nevertheless, Miss Thompson now announces that she supports Mr. Roosevelt. When challenged, she makes a formal statement of reasons. Her statement, when examined reveals that every one of her present reasons, her reasons for now supporting Mr. Roosevelt, have a common characteristic. This characteristic is remarkable and significant, as the reader will observe. While Miss Thompson's statement of reasons is long, the following sentences, I am sure, are a fair summary:

"This election occurs in a most critical period in the history of the democratic world. Its outcome has implications far beyond partisan considerations."

"The Axis desires the defeat of Mr. Roosevelt."

"They (the Axis powers) count on the gap between November and January when, in case of a change of Government, the United States will be in a sort of political no-man's land."

"The psychological result of the fall of Roosevelt would be Nazi jubilation in Germany, and popular depression in Great Britain, in a moment when the state of popular morale in both countries is the most important factor in the war."

THOSE ARE the reasons now given by Miss Thompson for supporting Mr. Roosevelt in this election. In those reasons is a common characteristic. Every one of those reasons has to do with Europe, the world. Every one of those reasons is concerned with the effect of Mr. Roosevelt's election or defeat, not on America, but on the war abroad. In Miss Thompson's long, 2,000-word statement of reasons for supporting Mr. Roosevelt, not one has any reference to America domestically. In order to support Mr. Roosevelt she throws overboard all the reasons, the eloquent and powerful reasons, given by herself in the past, why—from the domestic American point of view—Mr. Roosevelt's reelection would be undesirable. She relies wholly on reasons having to do with Europe and the war. No matter what happens to America domestically, Mr. Roosevelt should be reelected because of the effect Miss Thompson thinks his election would have on foreign peoples, on the war abroad.

That dilemma exists. The issues of this election come down to two. One is the future of the American form of government and society. The other is the war. The choice of the voter is not a clear one between these two issues, for they overlap upon each other intricately. The relation of the two Presidential candidates to the issues makes the picture yet more complex. On American policy about the war, on helping Britain, on resisting the Axis powers, the two candidates are in agreement. On preserving the American form of society and government, the difference between a third term for Mr. Roosevelt and election of Mr. Willkie is wide.

Mexican Singers To Attend Festival

Miss Eleanor Hague, of Pasadena, Calif., author of books on Latin-American music, will bring a group of Mexican singers, dancers and musicians to Washington for the fourth National Folk Festival, sponsored by The Washington Post, in Constitution Hall May 1, 2 and 3, 1941.

It will mark the first time Miss Hague and her group have appeared at the festival. She was in Washington yesterday completing arrangements. With her was Miss Frances Densmore, member of the national committee of the affair and author of a dozen or more books on Indian music.

The festival will feature Latin-American folk selections to further cement United States-South American friendships. Miss Hague also will present a group of old California dances and Indian and Spanish folklore.

Twenty-seven States were represented in last year's festival.

Baird Addresses Rotary on Wills

The importance of making wills and accurately detailing disposition of personal property after death was outlined to the Washington Rotary Club yesterday by Bruce Baird, president of the National Savings Trust Co., at a luncheon meeting in the Willard Hotel.

Baird suggested that wills should not be written by the individual, but should be legally drafted by an attorney to avoid difficulties.

White Winter Hat Beats Snow to Fashion Scene

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

New York, Oct. 23.—Hardly a color at all, the white and honey beige hats at American-designer Florence Reichman's studios, yet they're sitting fashion pulses a bit higher than usual. A feeling of great luxury always accompanies the wearing of something fresh and white with all black.

These sparkling new "advance" winter toques and bonnets and caps are at their best when worn with dark furs like mink, Persian and even silver and are dramatic too against severely plain black costume suits or untrimmed inky black coats. The timid woman can't "get away" with the stark white hat, however, as it takes some daring to blazen out in one when everybody else is sticking to deadly blacks. The woman of indefinite coloring can't wear white millinery either, as she looks washed out—but brunettes or Titian-haired girls look ravishing and bandbox fresh.

Blended Colors Are New Aid In Decorating

Accessories, Fabrics Keyed to Harmonize With Background

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THE MOST provocative color news that has turned up in many a day certainly takes the guess work out of decorating. In fact, it challenges doubters to a blindfold test wherein an ensemble is actually selected at random, blindfolded. The secret lies in colors so blended as to be congenial in any combination.

There are two different groups of such color lines on the market this fall, one of these consisting of a series of decorative fabrics in six different basic colors, all dyed in tones that are interchangeably harmonious with each other. The colors in this concordant group include green, burgundy, cocoa, roseberry, tea rose and blue, each offered in a variety of fabrics such as damask, an ombre satin stripe, a two-color chevron, a matelasse quilted cloth, a jaspe texture, a floral print.

The other line featuring correlated colors is even more ambitious, including not only fabrics but wall paper, carpets, lamps, accessories and featuring a range of seven colors, each in six different shades. These colors, keyed on Regency fashions, include gray-green, rose, gold, dull purple, gray-blue, turquoise, brown. Truly remarkable is the harmony of the most unexpected combinations—you really can select an ensemble blind-folded and be certain to have colors that go together!

As for wall colors, aside from the tints included in the correlated groups, the decorators predict that greens, especially the yellow greens, are back in fashion importance again with one leading designer putting lime green first in his list for fall walls. Two stores that create styles are sponsoring prominently a whole range of forest greens such as fern green, brush green, clear deep glade green.

Another color that has come up this year from partial oblivion is terra cotta and the whole range of the brick tones. A faded cedar dust, which is a sort of grayed ashes of roses, is of fashion importance. So are the gray blues, called slate, fog, horizon or smoke blue, through to the clear Wedgwood blues and the pure ultramarine tints.

Voluntary Services Prepares 300 Women Here to Meet Emergencies

SOME 300 women here are preparing themselves to act efficiently in any emergency, be it war or a traffic accident. They are members of the American Women's Voluntary Services, which, according to Mrs. Melville D. Church, of the advisory board, is organized on a permanent rather than a wartime basis. "We want to be useful if war should come; we also want to be able to help in case of other disasters," she explains. "Our map-reading course, for instance, will familiarize a woman with the topography of the countryside within a 60-mile radius of Washington. She might use this information in evacuating children during an invasion; but she also could make her way to the scene of a flood if the main roads were cut off."

The same principle applies to the first-aid and the dietetics courses being given A. W. V. S. members by the Red Cross. "First aid might save a life in a highway collision as well as on a battlefield," Mrs. Church points out. "And communal feeding work and epidemic feeding, which are dealt with in the dietetics course, will equip women for work in wartime canteens, or in temporary hospitals during an epidemic."

A lady who is doing over her Georgetown home hired a carpenter to hang a new bathroom door. She marveled at his deliberate method of working; he took all day, but she was sure the result would be worth it. After he left, she discovered that he had arranged the door with the bolt on the outside, so that anyone could be locked in and no one could be locked out of the room.

What Henry Ford did for the automobile he can do for the incubator, according to reports received by the Children's Bureau here. The chief pediatrician at the Henry Ford Hospital, it seems, learned that the Michigan Department of Health sorely needs low-cost incubators for use in rural communities. He interested Ford in the idea, and Dearborn engineers set to work experimenting with baby flivvers. Several models were built before such essential requirements as humidity regulation and portability were met satisfactorily. The result is a Model T incubator, much less expensive than existing types. Ten already are in use, the Children's Bureau says.

There's a member of a college band here who has solved the problem of waking up the morning after engagements by sending himself a telegram the night before. Unlike his alarm clock, the telegraph company keeps on ringing until he awakens. He finds he starts the day better after receiving such cheery messages as, "Happy Tuesday morning Stop Come out and join us Signed the Birds and Flowers."

"Oh, and the Hunts have a collection of old armor. Their halls are full of it."

"How marvelous! Well, they say that even the Hoards' pin trays are antiques."

"You don't say! Wouldn't it be wonderful to have a house like that!"

"Yes, at both the Hoards and the Stacks, it's just like going through a museum."

"The Hunts' is exactly the same way."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wed Six Months, in Second Marriage, Woman Asks How to Manage Disagreeable, Insulting Husband

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What can be done about a husband who is always fussing? Nothing I do seems to please my husband. For instance, he gets very angry if I so much as ask him to put on a clean shirt before going to work. (Yet I do not nag, nor am I bossy). We have been married six months.

We are in business and when salesmen come into our store, my husband makes unpleasant remarks to them about me and my son (by a former marriage). This is very humiliating but I love him a great deal and would like so much to be happy. But the question of happiness doesn't seem to bother him at all. Is there any helpful advice you can give me? O. M. C.

DEAR O. M. C.: As has been said, "You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear." Nor can an habitual boor be transformed into a considerate husband. In view of the fact that your husband discusses you openly and insultingly with disinterested acquaintances, I venture to think that he is too brutish in his feelings to understand (or care) what he is doing to you; and too callous or coarse-grained to be receptive to constructive suggestions or diplomatic persuasion.

Granted that he has a disagreeable disposition and odious temperament, the best advice I can give you is not to worsen the situation by irritating him with obtrusive attentions. Manage him without letting him know what is going on. Take your own illustration of his shirts, as a case in point. That bit of business could be handled more tactfully. Instead of asking or urging him to put on a clean shirt, take time by the forelock and drop his soiled laundry in the clothes hamper when tidying up his room at night. Either lay out clean linens for the next day at that time, or immediately on rising in the morning—and don't say a word about it. Just have what he needs in reach of his hand.

Since you "love him a great deal," in spite of his offensive behavior, and since you "want to be happy," you must express your love of him in serving his comfort without hope of appreciation, and you must find your happiness in knowing that daily he is growing more dependent upon your ministrations—even though he fails to realize it. What you had hoped for (piteous hope!) was an effectionate and courteous relationship, in which each was tenderly concerned with the other's well-being. But the man you married has no more concept of that civilized way of living than have the aborigines.

Not the least cause of your present unhappiness is your refusal (or reluctance) to relinquish the romantic dream and adapt to the harsh reality. No doubt you sometimes mention to your husband that you "want to be happy;" and one can imagine that such talk ("fool's talk," to him) simply annoys him further.

You may as well face the fact that the honeymoon (if any) is over; that your husband is a rough-and-tough individual; and that if you are determined to make the best of the marriage, you must put aside any wistful hopes of a gracious and soul-satisfying private life; you must forego the luxury of hurt feelings, and fall prosaically into his stride, behaving as casually toward him as he does toward you. There just isn't anything else to do—except leave him.

Can Father Take Baby From Mother?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We have been married nearly three years. We have a baby girl 1 year old. My husband is very disagreeable and inconsiderate. Recently (because the baby sometimes cries in the night and disturbs his sleep) he has been threatening to take her away from me and put her in a foundling home. Can he do that? He is older than I, and he says when a man marries, he is boss; that his wife must do whatever he says. Can I protect myself and the baby from him? ANXIOUS.

A Bully's Threat; Get Legal Protection

DEAR ANXIOUS: Your husband is a bully and a bluffer. He certainly cannot take your baby away from you and put her in a foundling home. For one thing, children of able-bodied parents aren't accepted in such institutions, which are financed to take care of children who have lost their parents. And for another thing, if he tried to abandon his child, he would be guilty of criminal behavior.

What's more, the fact that you married him doesn't make you his slave. You have citizenship rights coequal with his. You can go to court and compel from him decent treatment. Or you can, if you like, get a divorce and, I daresay, full custody of your child. To judge by his behavior as described, he is unfit to exercise a guardian's authority over her, and his treament of you can rightly be called "cruel and inhumane."

For full information on how to protect yourself and your baby against his meaness, go to the Legal Aid Bureau, at 1409 L Street Northwest, telephone NAtional 8674. This social agency provides legal counsel and representation, free of charge, to persons in need of such service, and unable to pay for it. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Doughboys to Get Both Spinach And Cake; Also Their Vitamins

By Ida Jean Kain

SUCH A to-do has been made over the provision of vitamins and minerals for soldiers in other parts of the globe that Uncle Sam's silence on the subject had me a bit uneasy—but no more. After a visit to the mess hall of Company G, Sixteenth Infantry, U. S. A., stationed at Fort Jay, I am perfectly satisfied that the Army not only gets its spinach but its full quota of chocolate cake as well!

Staff Sergeant J. F. Duhigg, who served as my instructor, handed me a random batch of menus that would do high credit to any housewife bent on pleasing a family whose hearty appetities are matched only by a talent for criticism. The Sergeant himself vochsafes—too modestly, I think—that "I'll stack our three squares a day against those of any first class boarding house in the country!"

If your boy has been conscripted, you needn't worry about his getting good food and plenty of it. How is this sample menu—the one that happened to be on top of the sheaf: For breakfast—oranges, cereal and you name your choice, fresh milk, soft-boiled egg, fried potatoes, toast, butter, coffee. For dinner—split pea soup with croutons, pork chops, corn-on-cob, sliced tomatoes, string beans, head lettuce, pickle relish, rye bread and butter, chocolate cake, coffee. And for supper—meat loaf with gravy, Lyonnaise potatoes, pickled beets, cinnamon buns, etc.

Second Helpings, Too

As it happens, that wasn't one of the spinach days. But if you housewives want a tip from the Sergeant, don't cook the stuff too long, serve it with butter, plenty of salt, a quartered egg, and have it on the same menu as ham—then watch it disappear!

Any menu, you say, can look good in print, but the aroma wafted from the Sergeant's domain made me wish I could be invited to supper. And, almost an hour before there was any prospect of the mess hall doors opening, the lads in khaki were clustered outside and consulting their watches.

The sergeant cast a baffled glance in their direction. "They have hollow legs," he declared. "The Army isn't like a restaurant. They can have all they want to eat—second helpings are a matter of course. And the way they eat! I figure they average over 4,000 calories a day. I guess I do about as well myself."

"Do you ever diet, Sergeant," I asked, sidetracked for the moment.

"Yes, I do," he replied, looking me straight in the eye. "Every once in awhile I take off 30 pounds or so. There's nothing to it. All a man has to do is drop down to about 1,400 calories a day. The hitch comes when he goes on a maintenance diet—that's when the calories sneak up on him!"

Even to the Bran Wafer

About those vitamins and minerals he says: "We don't worry about those things—but our meals are full of them. We go by the Army manual"—a publication which appears to be the military chef's bible—"and it's loaded with information about calories, vitamins and minerals. It tells just which foods contain iron and calcium—and, by the way, each soldier has his pint of milk a day—and which supply the various A, B, C's."

Since 1918, the daily food allowance per soldier has been increased from 20 to 30 cents. It can go as high as 50 cents, although the average is somewhat less. When food is purchased in such vast quantity, the values would make the budget-minded housewife turn an honest green with envy!

Emergency rations are being improved also. Instead of the choice between bully beef and canned roast beef, there's a new combination meat and bean dish, and a meat and vegetable stew, which are higher in vitamins. Instead of the hard white bread of yore, these rations include a bran wafer.

Make New Fall Chair Covers

NO END to the miracles you can work with gay slip covers! Dingy faded chairs take a new lease on life, dull rooms glow with color.

And in three easy stages you can make any style of cover you wish, from the formal upholstery-type cover to flounced styles.

For a dressy effect choose a luxurious rayon-cotton. Lovely is a moss-green with beige stripes and a tiny beige and rose figure.

In making the cover your first step is to remove cushion and smooth fabric down inside-back and over seat, leaving a 4-inch tuck-in between them to resist strain. Have fabric right side out if you plan to bind seams.

Now, where seams will be, anchor fabric to upholstery with pins. Cut, allowing 1½ inches for seams. In the same way fit fabric to arms, sides, back, front.

In your second stage, baste up the cover after removing it from the chair. Then try on for any little adjustments needed for a trim fit.

You can't go wrong making a slip cover when you follow the complete directions and diagrams given in our 40-page booklet, "Making Slip Covers Successfully," tells how to make striking covers for all types of chairs and sofas, from estimating material through pinning, cutting, fitting and finishing. Includes tips on smart fabrics, trimmings.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Making Slip Covers Successfully," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Mrs. W. L. Pierson Rolls Muffler Into Turban

Just Back From South America, She Startles Guests at Luncheon With Something New in Headgear

By Hope Ridings Miller

SOMETHING NEW in attractive headgear is being worn by Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, who, with her husband, the Export-Import Bank president, recently returned from a six weeks' trip to South America.

At luncheon at Pierre's yesterday Mrs. Pierson had on a twisted turban of green and red wool plaid that looked as if it might have been designed for Carmen Miranda.

Hope Ridings Miller

"It's one of Warren's old mufflers," Eleanor Pierson said. "I just tied it around my hair one day, for instance; found it comfortable, and decided I liked wearing it."

I must say it was becoming. In fact, if the rumor gets around that it's no trick at all to twist up a turban like it, Washington women may go in for a wholesale round of rummaging through closets to see if any more mufflers are available.

The Piersons' itinerary—mostly by plane—took them to virtually every South American country, and was most enjoyable. But Eleanor admits she's more than happy to be back in Washington once more. Incidentally, she has been away most of the time since June; spent the summer with her mother in California and just stopped by Washington long enough in September to pack her bags and be off again.

Now, the Piersons are in the throes of moving into new quarters at the Shoreham Hotel. They are to have the apartment formerly occupied by Dr. and Mrs. Oscar Albertini, who recently returned to their home in Havana.

Lunching with Mrs. Pierson yesterday was Mrs. Gordon Kern, of Rio de Janeiro, who, with her husband, came to the United States on the same plane on which the Piersons returned. Mr. and Mrs. Kern are staying at the Mayflower.

AN OLD AMERICAN custom that seems particularly strange to newcomers from foreign shores is that of ladies meeting en masse for luncheon. Mrs. Horace Williams, wife of Capt. Williams, of the British army, frankly admits she "has never seen anything like it."

A glance around the room at Pierre's yesterday did reveal an amazing number of luncheon parties including women only. I saw but one man in the entire throng, and he was at a corner table looking a bit unhappy about it all.

Mrs. Williams, by the way, plans to be in Washington "for the duration," and has taken an apartment at the Wardman Park. Coming along to the luncheon with her was her small daughter, Rosalynd, who will be entered at a Washington school some time soon.

IN TOWN for a brief stay is Mrs. William W. Butterworth, jr., wife of the Second Secretary of our Embassy at London. Arriving in this country a few days ago, she is staying at the Fairfax until tomorrow, when she plans to be off to New Orleans for a visit.

Mrs. Butterworth was feted yesterday afternoon at an informal cocktail party given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pell at their home on Massachusetts Avenue. The Pells entertained Tuesday evening at a small dinner for the former United States Minister to Latvia and Mrs. John C. Wiley, who will leave tomorrow for visits in Philadelphia and Baltimore.

FACTS AT THE RACES: Each afternoon when the horses run at Laurel, a sizable number of Capitalites are among the spectators. Regular attendants are Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, who usually entertain friends in their box. Mrs. Richard Casey, wife of the Australian Minister, was a guest of the Shouses yesterday; as were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Frost, of the Virginia hunt country. Meanwhile, the Chief of Cavalry and Mrs. John K. Herr were guests of Maj. and Mrs. G. L. Stryker—he's president of the Laurel track.

Comdr. Prices Change Date Of Daughter's Bow

Commander and Mrs. Allen Ingram Price have changed the date on which their daughter, Miss Mary-Stauart Montague Price, is to make her bow to Capital society. The supper dance, which will take place at the Carlton Hotel, is now set for Saturday, December 14.

Originally, Commander and Mrs. Price had arranged to give the party on November 9. Now, since the shifting of dates has been finished, Miss Price will be presented in Baltimore before she is in Washington. She will make her bow there at the Bachelor's Cotillion on December 2.

Greens Entertain For Irimescus

The retiring Rumanian Minister and Mme. Iremescu were the guests in whose honor Joseph C. Green, of the State Department, and Mrs. Green entertained at a small dinner last night in their Chevy Chase home.

Others in the company were the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry F. Grady, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Alling, and Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Culbertson.

MISS ANNE OGLE SHIVERS,

who is spending the winter here with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Leetch, of Georgetwon, will be presented at the Bachelor's Cotillion in Baltimore on December 2. The daughter of William E. Shivers, of Charles Town, Va., she attended school in Washington. She is a great-great-granddaughter of Col. John Tayloe, the noted Virginia planter and friend of George Washington, who built Octagon House; and she was named after Col. Tayloe's wife, Anne Ogle, the daughter of a Maryland Governor. While in Baltimore for the Cotillion, she will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Henry Renshaw, jr.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

MARIAN KIRK, who is busy taking cooking lessons, expects to be married a few days after Christmas to Dr. John W. Apple 3d. Their engagement was announced earlier in the autumn. Anne Wilkinson will fly from Honolulu, where she has been visiting her family, to be in the wedding. The two girls made their debuts the same year.

DUDLEY HARMON

Deborah Kirk, Marian's younger sister, will be home from Vassar for the Christmas holidays and will be in her sister's bridal party. Their father, Capt. Alan Kirk, is Military Attache at our embassy in London. Mrs. Kirk stayed there for almost a year of war, until Ambassador Kennedy advised wives to come home last summer.

* * * *

MRS. KENDALL MASON, we hear is not planning to live in Washington this year. Instead, she will stay in Tampa, Fla., where she is getting a divorce from George Grant Mason. This will be sad news to the many who have enjoyed the famous Mason parties at the big Victorian decorated house in Georgetown they had last year. The Masons used to entertain frequently at late suppers for theatrical folk. A very charming guest of honor on two occasions was Clare Booth, the playwright and reporter.

* * * *

IN HIS CAMPAIGN against Jimmy Cromwell, Senator Warren Barbour, of New Jersey, is being helped by tall, dark and extremely handsome Mrs. Barbour. She is traveling about the State making daily speeches. Her sister, Mrs. Sidney Lee, of Washington, an energetic worker in the Willkie vineyard, will go to New York on election day to vote and will then join the Barbours at their place near Rumson. The family is planning to sit up with sandwiches and hot coffee until the final returns are in.

WHEN DR. Heinrich Simon was co-owner of the Franfurter Zeitung, music was his hobby. Now he is a refugee from Germany and that hobby has perforce become his profession. He is teaching and lecturing in the Capital.

The other evening, at the Washington College of Music, he and Frances Nash (Mrs. Edwin Watson), played a Chopin rondo together which was received with great applause. Among those in the audience were Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woodward and Mrs. Marion Warburg. Since the injury to her back which forced her to cancel an engagement last spring as soloist with the Philadelphia Symphony, Mrs. Watson has been able to practice only an hour a day. She was particularly eager to play with Dr. Simon, whom she knew in better days in Germany. Their duet climaxed a lecture which the former publisher gave on Chopin.

Mrs. Watson was very glamorous in a long-sleeved, black dinner dress with which she wore green satin slippers. Gen. and Mrs. Watson have a farm near Charlottesville and the Woodwards are going to build one near it. Mrs. Woodward hasn't yet drawn up plans for the house but is already planting her garden.

ANOTHER MUSICAL European planning to return here, it's reported, is Nadia Boulanger, the famous French teacher of composition. Now in Vichy, Mlle. Boulanger has been active since her country surrendered, in relief work for the families of French musicians. Her school in Versailles was known all over the world, but the story is that she may now open one in this country.

The leading French woman professor always stopped in Washington on trips to this country. In past years she has given annual lectures at Radcliffe, Wellesley and other colleges. When in the Capital she usually stays with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss at Dumbarton Oaks.

Charles E. Brousse, newly arrived press attache of the French Embassy, and Mrs. Brousse have taken an apartment at the Wardman Park for the winter. They recently came here from New York.

Marines, Wives Pay Respects to Gen. Holcomb

Mrs. Potts Hostess At Annual Festival In Barracks Here

By Elizabeth Henney

While the scarlet-coated Marine Band Orchestra played gay tunes yesterday afternoon in the Band Hall at Marine Barracks, Marine officers and their wives paid their respects to their commandant, Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, at the annual festive get-together.

On hand with Gen. Holcomb during the afternoon was his son, Frank Holcomb. Since Mrs. Holcomb is ill, hostess for the occasion was Mrs. John Potts, wife of Col. Potts, the new commanding officer of the Marine Barracks. Mrs. Potts was gowned in wine brown with brown accessories and a short cape of mole. Assisting in officiating were Maj. and Mrs. Harold E. Rosecranz, the latter wearing a costume of soft purple tones.

The band was on a flag-draped dais at one of the hall. Just in front of it there was a large semi-circle of tables, loaded with all varieties of edibles and drinkables. Due to a special plea of Col. Potts, one table was dedicated to large quantities of "food that a man can eat." And it was! Hams, turkeys roasted to a turn, and bread and butter were the mainstays, and the rapidity with which it was depleted proved beyond question the popularity of the menu. Scotch and soda were served from another table, and two small tables were allotted for flowing punch bowls filled with the Marine special rum punch

Maj. Strong Greeted After World Jaunt

A gay place for gay occasions, the band hall reflects strongly its Marine connection. Smartly uniformed sentries guard the entrance and around the walls of the hall are glass-framed famous Marine flags. Of especial interest is the flag occupying the central space on the wall, a white one bearing a blue coat of arms. It was one of the first Marine flags, and was carried by Marines under Gen. Winfield Scott in the Mexican War of 1847. It also bears the legend, embroidered on the flag, "From Tripoli to the Halls of Montezuma," the phrase from which the Marine song was written. The barracks, by the way, are the oldest in this section of the country. The commandants quarters were built in 1801.

Being welcomed on all sides was Maj. Philip Strong who has just returned to town from a knapsack jaunt around the world during which he visited far corners of unheard of places.

A center of another group of well wishers were the recently arrived bride and the bridegroom of the post. Capt. and Mrs. Norman Hussa, who arrived at the Marine Barracks recently for station following their wedding in Honolulu, Hawaii.

High-Ranking Couples Attend

Among high-ranking families noted during the afternoon were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Alexander A. Vandegrift, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Seth Williams, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Russell B. Putnam, Col. and Mrs. James Underhill, Col. and Mrs. Charles B. Price, and Col. and Mrs. John W. Thomason, jr.

Also noted were Lieut. Col. and Mrs. James Webb, the latter in dark red with matching accessories; Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Walter Rogers, she in a smart outfit of juniper green accented with a fur stole; Capt. and Mrs. Jack Juhan, the latter chic in a Kelly green sport model with black accessories; Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Harold C. Major, the latter smartly outfitted in all black, and Col. and Mrs. William Capers James, she accenting her fair hair with a smart black pillbox hat.

Others included Capt. and Mrs. Austin R. Brunelli, Maj. and Mrs. Lionel C. Goudeau, Col. and Mrs. Arnold W. Jacobsen and their daughter, Miss Lemira Jacobsen, Capt. and Mrs. Allen C. Koonce, Capt. and Mrs. Clarence J. O'Donnell, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Emmett W. Skinner, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. John M. Tildsley and many more.

S. Rowe, Director General of the Pan American Union; Laurence Duggan, Chief of the American Republics Division of the State Department; Dr. Octavio Beeche; Dorsey Fisher, and from the legation staff, Dr. Carlos Alfaro, Dr. Felipe Vega-Gomez and Dr. Victor de Sola.

With Mrs. Foster Adams and Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Mrs. Watson is one of the founders of the guild, which will inaugurate a series of evening concerts next month.

Among those attending yesterday were Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, Mrs. Mathew John Whitall, Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. Thomas Cajigas, Mrs. Woodward, Miss Lisa Gardiner, Dr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, Dr. Edwin Barnes and Dr. and Mrs. Walter Bauer.

Rita Dwyer Is Wed Here

The Chapel of the Apostolic delegation was the scene yesterday of the marriage of Miss Rita Ward Dwyer and Dr. Ciro O. Scotti, both of Providence, R. I. Archbishop Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, the Apostolic Delegate, performed the ceremony.

Dr. Scotti, son of Commendatore Luigi Scotti, is a former member of the Palatine Guard. Archbishop Cicognani was chaplain of the University of Rome when Scotti studied there, and the two men became friendly at this time. Commendatore Scotti is a member of the Order of the Italian Royal Crown. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Matthew S. Dwyer, of Providence.

For the wedding the bride wore a gown of ivory satin with a round neckline, long tight sleeves and a godet train. Her long ivory tulle veil was worn over a Juliet cap of duchess lace. She carried a spray of white orchids.

Miss Alice B. Dwyer, sister of the bride, was her only attendant. Her gown was of white velvet, and she wore a modified Juliet cap of the same material. She carried a bouquet of red roses.

Dr. Luigi Scotti, the bridegroom's father, was best man, and David B. Dwyer, the bride's brother, served as guest usher. The bride was given away by her uncle, David J. Barry, of Providence. The Rev. Cornelius B. Collins, of Providence, and the Rev. Edward A. Higney, of Newport, R. I., assisted the archbishop at the nuptial mass. Father Higney is a cousin of the bride.

Following the wedding a breakfast was served in the Garbo room of the Shoreham, where the evening before the family held a prenuptial dinner as a reception for Archbishop Cicognani. After the reception Dr. and Mrs. Scotti left on a wedding trip through the South.

Ann Perry, W. E. Williams Nuptials Held

Couple Married At Chevy Chase By Rev. E. G. Latch

Chevy Chase Methodist Church yesterday morning was the scene of the marriage of Miss Ann Perry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Perry and William Edward Williams, son of Mrs. William Williams, of Poolesville, Md.

With the Rev. Edward G. Latch officiating, the couple exchanged their vows at 11 o'clock. White chrysanthemums and palms decorated the church, and members of the families witnessed the rites.

Sister Serves As Only Attendant

Given in marriage by her father, the bride appeared in a dark red costume suit, worn with brown accessories. Her bouquet was of Johanna Hill roses and gardenias. Mrs. Paul C. Hannun, of Culver, Ind., was her sister's only attendant. Her rose-beige velveteen frock was worn with brown accessories and was accented with an arm bouquet of bronze chrysanthemums.

Richard Hankins, of Williamsburg, Va., was best man, and ushers included Charles Sellman, of Poolesville, Md., and the bride's brother, Thomas W. Perry, jr.

Immediately following the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's parents. Receiving the guests, Mrs. Perry wore a brown costume suit. Mrs. Williams, who assisted, had chosen a frock of black velvet.

A. A. U. W. National Board To Discuss Defense

It Is Up to Women to Preserve Permanent Values of Civilization, Says Dr. Margaret Morriss, Association President

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

It is up to the women of America to preserve the permanent values of civilization in the face of defense plans which turn men away to thought of war, Dr. Margaret S. Morriss, president of the American Association of University Women, declared yesterday.

Dr. Morriss, who is dean of Pembroke College, Brown University, in Providence, R. I., is here for the three-day meeting of the national board of the association, which opens today, with defense one of the primary topics for discussion.

"It will be unfortunate if we, as women, relinquish our interest in human welfare, education and child development," she said. "It is our part to see that life goes on."

Dr. Morriss said it was the purpose of the university women to "deepen, strengthen and better implement" the program the A. A. U. W. has been carrying on for years. They plan to devote themselves in an even more serious way than before to their work in education, international relations, social studies and the arts, which are the four divisions of their program.

DR. MARGARET S. MORRISS

The board includes top-ranking women in the educational field from all over the country, and has as two of its members Miss Harriet W. Elliott, consumer representative on the National Defense Board, and Dr. Caroline F. Ware, administrative assistant to Miss Elliott in the civilian defense work.

Dr. Morriss called attention to the statement on the A. A. U. W.'s attitude on defense in the October journal of the association: "After all, democracy has given to women more freedom and opportunity than any other form of government. Too often women prefer to retreat into conventional, protected activities rather than to face the challenge of reality. Therefore, we must make a conscious effort to assume those responsibilities that we are qualified to fulfill."

All over the country, she said, association members are turning their energies toward defense, by making a definite effort to understand present-day issues; by exploring resources, material and human, with a view to making them available to the country in this emergency; by serving where their training will do the most good; and by never losing sight of the American ideal.

The board members taking part in the defense discussions are Dr. Louise Pound, Lincoln, Nebr.; Dr. Dera Parkinson, Columbus, Miss.; Mrs. A. Ross Hill, Kansas City, Mo.; Mrs. Adam Leroy Jones, Montclair, N. J.; Dr. Elizabeth P. Jackson, Decatur, Ga.; Dr. Irma E. Voigt, Athens, Ohio; Miss Martha Enochs, Jackson, Mrs. H. K. Painter, Minneapolis, Minn.; Dr. Margaret Justin, Manhattan, Kans.; Mrs. W. S. Garnsey, Greeley, Colo.; Mrs. Victor Burke, Pullman, Wash.; Mrs. Malbone W. Graham, Santa Monica, Calif.; Dr. Kathryn McHale, general director, Washington; Mrs. James K. McClintock, Washington; Dr. Meta Glass, Sweet Briar, Va.; Mrs. Irene T. Heineman, Los Angeles; Dr. Alzada Comstock, South Hadley, Mass.; Dr. Caroline F. Ware, Vienna, Va.; Mrs. F. G. Atkinson, Minneapolis; Dean Harriet W. Elliott, Washington; Dr. Susan M. Kingsbury, Bryn Mawr, Pa.; Mrs. Lawrence Radford, Washington.

The local branch will entertain at a dinner for the board tonight at the clubhouse, 1634 I Street.

THE WOMEN'S NATIONAL PRESS CLUB Tuesday night paid tribute to the late Ruth Eleanor Jones, who was society editor of the Times-Herald, by the creation of a fellowship fund in her memory.

Miss Elizabeth E. Poe proposed the resolution creating the fund. Its purpose will be to help newspaper women who are in financial straits because of illness or other reasons.

Mrs. Helen Essary, president of the club, and other members took occasion to express the affection and esteem held for Ruth Jones by the club.

A board will be appointed to administer the fund.

MISS MABEL STRIDER, of the local Zonta Club, will preside as regional chairman at the regional conference of Zonta International, to be held Saturday and Sunday at the Gramatan Hotel in Bronxville, N. Y.

The theme of the conference will be "Woman in the Scheme of Business," with Miss Vera Lundquist, of the United States Chamber of Commerce, a member of the Washington Club, and Dr. Evelyn Luke, president of the Hagerstown Club, among the speakers.

International relations will be discussed by Miss Jessie Ekins, of Ontario, second vice president of the international organization.

Others from Washington, who will attend, include Mrs. Ethel J. Hess, Miss Sarah Carrick, Miss Mary Sigman, Miss Esther C. M. Gude and Miss Irene Neikirk.

HALLOWEEN PARTY—Just as I was wondering what had happened to all the black cats and witches, along came the announcement of a good old-fashioned Halloween party. The Bank Women's Club will have one tomorrow night at Wesley Hall, 1703 K Street.

The affair will be a dinner at 6:15 to which members will bring guests. Katharine McKalmont is president of the club and Paggy Webster chairman of the dinner committee, with Constance Jones in charge of the entertainment.

AND ANOTHER—The Wanderbirds Hiking Club has also announced its annual Halloween masquerade dance, to be held at the Hayloft, 1326 Massachusetts Avenue, Saturday from 9 p. m. to midnight. There will be prizes for the best costumes and appropriate Halloween refreshments.

ALUMNAE RECEPTION—The Alumnae of Georgia State College for Women will have a reception and dinner at the Fairfax Hotel Friday night at 6 o'clock, followed by election of officers. Mrs. S. Gordon Green is now president.

SHIFT IN OFFICERS—When the Army and Navy Chapter of the D. A. R. elected its officers last May it thought everything was in running order for the year but it had not counted on the recent promotions and new tours of duty for Army officers.

Mrs. Frank Clark, wife of Brig. Gen. Clark, will go to Fort Monroe, Va., where he has been ordered, and Mrs. Hubert E. Paddock, the vice regent, succeeds her as head of the chapter. Mrs. James P. Marley, wife of Brig. Gen. Marley, who was elected corresponding secretary, will go to Camp Jackson, S. C., and has been succeeded by Mrs. W. E. Pattison French.

The Ellis Island committee of the District D. A. R. meets tomorrow at the Chapter House with Earl G. Harrison, director of registration at the Department of Justices, as speaker. Mrs. George W. Eastment is chairman.

Maryland Society Will Dance Friday

The first reception, entertainment and dance of the season for the Maryland Society will be held on Friday, at the Kennedy-Warren, beginning at 9 o'clock.

Robertson, wife of the third vice president; Mrs. George Amory Maddox, wife of the treasurer, and Mrs. Franklin D. Zantzinger, the corresponding secretary.

Miss Marie Sauter will sing a group of songs and the singing of "Maryland, My Maryland," will be led by Miss Sauter and N. Thornton Hynson with Mrs. Hynson accompanying.

Women Will Study Famed Men's Letters

For the third consecutive year of the American Association of University Women, classical letter writers group, under the leadership of Mrs. A. S. McDaniel, will study the letters of famous men.

This year they will consider the letters of the seventeenth, eighteenth and nineteenth century writers, paying especial attention to history, politics and social background of the periods, as reflected in the letters. Individual style and artisanship will be noted. This is designed as an inspirational course in letter writing.

Moose Women Hear Leader

Members of Columbia Chapter, Women of the Moose, were urged last night to carry Mooseheart standards into their homes and communities.

They were addressed by their grand regent, Mrs. Marie Christiansen, of Des Moines, Iowa, here to confer with Miss Katherine Smith, grand chancellor, at the national headquarters of the organization. Mrs. Christiansen was entertained at a banquet given by the chapter at the Kenesaw on Sixteenth Street, at which Mrs. Anna Gilbert, senior regent, presided.

She pointed out that the findings of the child research laboratories in Mooseheart, the "city of children," maintained for orphans of members of the order near Chicago, are available to the child study and training groups of all chapters. Others in the community also may join these groups. Social service work such as is done for the children at Mooseheart and the aged at Moosehaven, in Florida, is carried into communities by women of the order through local welfare work, said Mrs. Christiansen.

The nearly 900 chapters throughout the country are all organizing their own Red Cross units and also stand ready to help in any way with provision for the 100 or more refugee children which Mooseheart has offered to take, she added.

Among the guests last night were Miss Smith, the grand chancellor; Mrs. A. A. Ludwig, recording secretary of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Ethel Sendlak, department president of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary; Mrs. Helen M. McCabe, department president of the American Legion Auxiliary, and Mrs. Mary B. McMillin, national executive committeewoman for the District of the American Legion Auxiliary.

'Dry' U.S. Asked As Defense Aid

The District W. C. T. U., at the closing session of its convention yesterday, passed resolutions calling on the Government to "prohibit the manufacture of alcoholic liquors, including beer and wine," as a measure of conservation and defense," and urging that "defense plans provide for refusal to grant permits for sale of alcoholic liquor, including beer and wine, in canteens, military training camps and territory adjacent to them."

The local union reaffirmed its belief that all possible efforts should be made to keep the country out of war, but endorsed plans for adequate national defense.

Another resolution urged total abstinence from alcoholic liquor as the only safeguard for the individual. It declared the legalized liquor traffic inimical to the best interests of the country, endangering the general welfare, public morals and safety.

*X WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1940 19

Auditor Donovan Dies at 64

Physician Blames Death on Heart Fatigue; Major Had Scorned Rest

Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, auditor and unofficial "boss" of the District government, who refused to take a vacation for the past ten years because he had "too much work to do," died last night from an overtaxed heart.

A breakdown in health that began eight months ago forced the 64-year-old budget chief to take to his bed three weeks ago, and Sunday he suffered an attack of coronary thrombosis. Monday Maj. Donovan fell into a coma and he remained unconscious until his death at 9 p. m. last night.

Dr. William S. Greaney, the family physician, attributed death to an overworked heart. For the past eight months Maj. Donovan had been warned time and again that he must take a month's vacation and rest, but the major would put off all protests with the remark:

"I can't afford to. There's too much work to be done."

Filled Four Jobs

Maj. Donovan, besides supervising the audit of accounts for the many departments of the District government, performed the duties of comptroller for the District, served as its budget officer, and as chairman of the personnel board.

Associates said that Maj. Donovan had never taken more than a day or two at a time off from work. The District Commissioners for years have tried to ease the burden on the local government's key man, and last week were considering a plan to name a separate budget chief and an assistant executive auditor.

Informed by The Washington Post of his colleague's death, Commissioner David McCoach, jr. said: "The District has lost a wonderful servant. I am deeply sorry." Col. McCoach's voice was choked by grief. He and "the major" were close friends.

Family at Bedside

Members of Maj. Donovan's family were at his bedside when he died at his home, 2924 Cortland Place Northwest. Surviving are his wife, Edith, and two sons, James and Daniel, jr.

Washington born, Maj. Donovan entered District service 49 years ago as a clerk in the assessor's office when he was 15. From there on his career was a series of upward steps. He became auditor in 1919, and took on the additional task of budget officer two years later. In the latter post he had handled $1,000,000,000 in District funds. His last budget—for 1941—ran up to $50,000,000.

Nominally, Maj. Donovan's superiors were the District Commissioners. Actually, "the major"—as he was affectionately known by colleagues and employes—inducted and even instructed new Commissioners in their jobs, and it was upon his word and judgment that the Appropriations Committees of the House and Senate usually established the District budget.

All legislation for the Nation's Capital had to be approved by Maj. Donovan before it could get to "first base" on Capitol Hill, and the Commissioners let him run the District unmolested unless there was a serious question of policy to be decided.

Headed 1917 Draft Here

During the World War he was in charge of selective service law administration here, and for this service was commissioned a major in the United States Army.

Despite his pressure for time, Maj. Donovan was active in the annual Red Cross and Community Chest drives, and was a member of numerous civic organizations. He was organizer of the Vincent B. Costello Post of American Legion. He was a devout Catholic.

Because of his many jobs, Maj. Donovan was frequently involved in disputes pertaining to the District government. In 1925, for instance, he was sued by a citizen in an attempt to prohibit payment of salaries to school instructors who taught evolution.

Today in all District buildings—government, schools, firehouses, police stations—flags will be flown at half staff for "the major."

Youth Loses 'Siamese Twin' Surgery Suit

A District Court jury yesterday upheld Robert E. Moran, plastic surgeon, who was sued for $75,000 by John Melvin Bonner, colored, 16, who cooperated in an operation to help a girl relative of his who was badly scarred by burns.

The jurors heard evidence, before Justice Jesse C. Adkins, for nearly a week, but deliberated only half an hour before deciding in favor of Dr. Moran.

Bonner was acclaimed as a hero in 1937, when he was joined to his cousin, Clara Howard, colored, then 13, in a "siamese twin" operation. The girl had been scarred by burns and the operation joined a rope of the boy's flesh to hers. Eventually the surgeons intended to graft this flesh over the places where the girl had been scarred. The process was abandoned, however, when unequal blood circulation weakened the boy.

Bonner's mother, Mrs. Margaret Moore, colored, sued on December 8, 1938, charging that she and her son consented to a mere blood transfusion and not to the "twin" operation. However, several witnesses testified that Bonner and his mother understood what was being done and gave their full consent.

Georgetown Citizens' Group Is Oldest in a D. C. Community

This is the twenty-fifth article in a series about citizens' associations in the District of Columbia and their efforts to make the community a better place in which to live.

Members of the Georgetown Citizens Association, oldest citizens unit in a District community, older than Washington itself, are reported to be—to a man—opposed to third terms for the association's presidents. In the 50-odd years of the unit's existence, presidents have never served more than two terms.

The association's collective views on national politics are limited to advocacy of national suffrage for the District. Members believe that Congress should continue to run the city, and they approve the present Commissioner form of Government for Washington.

Accomplishments of the organization have been numerous during its long history.

Acquisition of Montrose Park, called the most naturally landscaped park in the city, was the result of the unit's efforts, as was the Georgetown Playground on Volta Place, according to Secretary Joseph I. Cavanaugh.

The M Street Bridge over Rock Creek was the outcome of the virtually unaided work of the association, Cavanaugh reports.

Several other citizens' bodies, however, including one formed especially for the purpose, joined with the Georgetown citizens to obtain the modern Public Library branch at Wisconsin Avenue and R Street Northwest, he added.

The Georgetown members were largely instrumental in obtaining replacement of the old Aqueduct Bridge by the present Francis Scott Key Bridge, the secretary said, and successfully opposed its location to the east of Rock Creek, which would have left Georgetown cut off from direct intercourse with nearby Virginia.

In the days when the only secondary public school west of Rock Creek was an advanced class in the Curtis School, in Georgetown, the association began a campaign which culminated in construction of Western High School on its present site, according to President B. H. Meyer.

Future improvements are discussed at monthly meetings held on the fourth Monday in St. John's Parish Hall. Officers include Meyer, a former commissioner of the Interstate Commerce Commission, now serving his first term as president; George L. Nicholson, vice president; Wallace Streater, treasurer, and Jospeh I. Cavanaugh, secretary.

Members of the executive committee are Frederick M. Bradley, John H. Doyle, Ernest I. Lewis, George L. Nicolson, Isaac B. Nordlinger, and B. H. Meyer.

Much of the association's efforts have entailed watching the interests of Georgetown residents in matters such as zoning, traffic, police and fire protection and public utilities service.

Board Approves Plan to Request Added Facilities At Colored Unit

The Board of Education voted yesterday to request the District Commissioners to increase the limit of cost of the first unit of the new senior high school at Twenty-fourth Street and Benning Road Northeast from $900,000 to a sum necessary to provide four additional facilities.

The additional request is for an enlarged assembly hall with a capacity of approximately 1,800; two gymnasiums, and a chemistry laboratory and lecture room.

A $20,000 appropriation has already been made for the drawing of plans for the $900,000 colored high school.

Gannon Sworn In

Dr. James A. Gannon was sworn in yesterday afternoon as a new member of the Board of Education to fill the unexpired term of the late Gratz E. Dunkum, from October 14 to June 30.

A vote of commendation was adopted by the board for school officials, employes and volunteers who served on the selective service registration staff October 16. A telegram from Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, praising the prompt and efficient handling of the registration, was read to the board by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent.

"Some difficulties are attending the use of school facilities" for the draft boards, Dr. Ballou said, adding that some facilities "are not entirely adequate." But he said that "soon we will have arrangements satisfactorily made, I think."

The new Calvin Coolidge High School was announced yesterday as winner of a trophy offered by the University of Virginia alumni of Washington for the white high school enrolling the largest percentage of male students in the cadet corps. Fifty-six per cent of the boys in that school are cadets.

Cadet Officers Named

Among appointments of cadet officers in high schools, David A. Goldstein, of Eastern High School, was named brigade adjutant (major) and Walton M. Hudson of the same school, brigade supply officer (major). The appointment of David A. Rhodes as brigade commander had already been announced.

Mrs. G. T. Peterson was appointed principal of Browne Junior High School to succeed E. L. Haynes, who was promoted several months ago to the principalship of Armstrong High School. Mrs. Peterson has served nine years in elementary and 13 years in junior high schools here.

Four schools will be dedicated during American Education Week, November 10-16, Dr. Ballou announced. The schedule is: November 12, Randall Junior High School, addition; November 13, Rudolph School, new building; November 14, Smothers School, addition; November 15, Kingsman, addition.

The dedication of the new Jefferson Junior High School will be deferred to December 7 because that is the sixty-eighth anniversary of the dedication of the original Jefferson School.

The board yesterday accepted a grant of $3,000 by the Carnegie Corporation of New York in three annual installments for the purchase of books for Miner Teachers College.

Funeral Service To Be Held Today For Mrs. Hynson

Mrs. Lucy W. Hynson, 90, died at her residence, 1464 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, following a brief illness. The widow of the late Samuel T. Hynson, of Kent County, Md., she was born in King George County, Va., in 1850.

She was the daughter of Richard V. Tiffey, of Westmoreland County, Va., and Sarah W. Tiffey, of Randolph, Vt.

She was for 50 years an active member of the Episcopal Church and was identified for many years with the Women's Auxiliary and the National Cathedral Association of Washington.

She is survived by three sons, Dr Laurence M. Hynson, N. Thornton Hynson and Richard W. Hynson, who is the assistant treasurer of the Washington Cathedral. All are Washingtonians.

Interment will be in Oak Hill Cemetery. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, assisted by Dr. ZeBarney T. Phillips and Canon Raymond T. Waldon, of Washington Cathedral, will officiate at services at 11 a. m. today.

U. S. Worker Acquitted Of Police Assault Charge

Lawrence E. Taylor, colored, 28, a postoffice employe, was acquitted by a Police Court jury late yesterday of a charge of assaulting Traffic Division Policeman Lawrence A. Hartnett.

The charge, with four others, grew out of a chase on Michigan avenue northeast, September 3, when Hartnett said he paced Taylor at 40 miles an hour.

The policeman testified that Taylor kicked him in the abdomen, inflicting injuries which required hospitalization. Taylor denied striking the policeman, and stated that he was struck in the face several times and beaten over the head with an emergency electric light.

At previous trials last month, Taylor was fined a total of $100 on charges of speeding, being an unlicensed hacker and failure to exhibit his permit or registration card. He demanded a jury trial on the assault count.

West Virginia Registrations Ruled Valid

Senate Inquiry Exonerates Voters Who Live in District

Investigators for the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee yesterday held that the hundreds of Washingtonians accused of illegal registration in West Virginia are bona fide residents of the State "and, as such, are probably entitled to register and vote."

This conclusion was, however, immediately challenged by Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, who declared that "indications point to the fact that no real investigation was made."

Making it clear that he did not refer to Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, chairman of the committee, Senator Holt asserted that "my conversation with one official of the committee indicated no particular desire to open the matter up."

"If I find that an effort has been made to squelch it, the people will hear about it," he added.

The allegedly improper registrations, involving at least 900 persons, are in Jefferson, Berkeley and Morgan Counties at the eastern tip of the panhandle—in the district of Representative Jennings Randolph, Democratic "mayor" of Washington.

The committee statement, issued yesterday by Senator Gillette, declared that agents had checked up on a list of names of Washingtonians who were charged with "voting in the State of West Virginia by absentee ballot and without authority to do so." The agents, said the statement, "do not find evidence that the list contains other than bona fide residents of West Virginia."

But the statement added that the committee could not interpret the West Virginia election law to determine whether the persons involved had lost their right to vote in their home State because of residence in Washington.

It is understood that committee agents had checked about 10 per cent of the accused registrees, and found uniformly that they do claim West Virginia residence, although temporarily living in Washington.

Representative Randolph, who was out of town yesterday, stated several days ago that "improper registration and voting should not be countenanced."

Meanwhile Howard Hunter, acting Commissioner of the WPA, filed a statement with the committee in answer to allegations that the WPA had padded its rolls prior to the election.

Declaring that "WPA employment has been reduced much more rapidly than the decline in unemployment," Hunter said that the WPA rolls for September had averaged 600,000 less than in March. The October increase will be about 100,000, scheduled many months ago.

"In areas where defense contracts bring about sufficient improvement in private employment, the WPA program will be closed down altogether, and instructions have already been issued to State officials to do this," Hunter said.

The committee announced that it has advised Earl Browder, Communist candidate for President, that it will "be ready to receive any material he desires to present at any time."

Chapter Installs Officers at Banquet In Wardman Park

The eighth sorority to make its appearance on the University of Maryland campus was officially welcomed last night in ceremonies at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Welcomers were Miss Adele Stamp, dean of women, and Dr. Harold Benjamin, dean of the college of education, who addressed the installation banquet of the recently-established Beta Beta Chapter of Gamma Phi Beta.

Mrs. R. E. Fitzgerald, national president of the sorority, presented the charter to the chapter. A set of silver service was presented by Mrs. Paul Whitney, president of the Washington Alumnae Chapter, in behalf of her organization.

Miss Patricia Dodd, treasurer of the new chapter, was toastmistress. Other charter members are Misses Barbara Richmond, president; Caroline McGill, vice president; Mary Parlett, corresponding secretary; Betty Hall, reporting secretary; Margaret Bereton, pledge trainer; Sarah Shepard, rush chairman; Myrtle Killingsworth, Barbara Bartlett, Erma Hughes, Charlotte White, Dorothy Brosius, Dorothy Rundles, Dorothy Haislip, Betty Lou Sullivan, Betty Lou Fike, Margaret Bonfill, Jean Kepner, Eleanor Bradburn, Mary Skidmore, Margaret Loar, Eleanor Mackie, Rose Britton, Mary Griffith and Louise Gardiner.

Pete Macias, of Washington, and his band will open the program with several musical selections. Entertainment also will include songs by Ed Steffe, of the Gridiron Club Quartet.

The Willkie Democratic Club was organized a month ago. Other officers, besides Morgan, are Frederick Stohlman, vice chairman; Arthur Defenderfer, treasurer; Gregory S. Prince, counsel, and Mrs. B. L. Colton, secretary.

Civic Group Asks Airport Costs Be Split

Arkansas Ave. Association Urges U. S., D. C. to Share Burden

Equitable distribution between the District and Federal governments of costs of the new national airport was asked last night in a resolution adopted by the Arkansas Avenue Community Association.

The resolution proposed that the costs be allocated on a basis commensurate with benefits from airport operation received by the city and the Federal Government.

A committee was named by the association to negotiate with the Capital Transit Co. and the Public Utilities Commission to arrange for stopping Thirteenth Street express buses at either Emerson or Decatur Streets during rush hours.

The association heard an address on the relation of communication to national defense from W. B. Wheeler, assistant to the president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

Holbrook Farms Denied Injunction In Milk Case

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue upheld the constitutionality of the Washington milk-marketing agreement—which fixes prices and controls practices of dairies here—in an opinion given in the District Court yesterday.

Justice O'Donoghue refused an injunction sought by the Holbrook Farms Dairy, Brentwood, Md., which asserted that it was not in interstate commerce because all its business was done in Maryland.

Justice O'Donoghue upheld the contentions of Edward Knuff, Special Assistant Attorney General, that the Holbrook Dairy competed vigorously with District dairies for trade in Montgomery and Prince Georges counties.

Crash Squad Reports D. C. Cooperating

25% Rise Noted In Driver's Notices To Police on Minor Motor Mishaps

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

Reports of traffic accidents in the District have increased 25 per cent since the new police accident investigation squad began operations September 22, it was revealed last night.

Inspector Arthur E. Miller, chief of the new unit, estimated an average of 48 crashes a day have been reported to police and investigated by his squad since its formation. Accident reports averaged 33 a day during the past fiscal year, he added.

A "conscience-stricken" motoring public is responsible for the sudden increase in crash reports, Miller explained. Because motorists fear police action under the new setup if they fail to tell of mishaps, even accidents of the most minor nature are being reported, Miller said.

Prior to establishment of the "crash" squad, he pointed out, police were frequently willing to ignore accidents where slight damage was involved and the participants agreed to settle differences between themselves.

"But now we are not willing to 'forget' even the smallest crash," said Miller, "and the driving public apparently has become acutely aware of this. We are trying to get a complete picture of Washington's accident problem—and for that reason have requested reports in all types of crashes."

A total of 1,415 accidents—from fatal to the scratched fender variety—have been investigated by police since September 22, records showed yesterday. The bulk of these were handled by Miller's squad. Three fatal crashes occurred during the unit's first month of activities.

On the lightest day since inception of the squad, 34 accidents were reported. This jumped to a high of 104 last Saturday, Miller said.

"But I am certain," he added, "that the number of accidents has not actually increased—simply more reports are being made by motorists. Although in the face of rising crash figures Washington may receive a 'black eye' in national tabulations, Miller said he was not worried.

"For the first time," he said, "we will have a true picture of our situation, something we have never had because motorists refused to keep us informed."

Ossabaw Wins Chevy Chase Jumping Feature

Mayer Horse Holds Lead Entire Race

Oneechee Takes Second Money as Good Chance Falls At Sixth Fence

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Laurel, Md., Oct. 23.—Running along in front like a fox being chased by the hounds, Ossabaw, a 6-year-old gelding owned by L. B. Mayer of the movie industry led all the way to win the historic Chevy Chase Handicap Steeplechase here today. Never having less than a length advantage, Ossabaw came to the finish line two lengths in front of the nearest opposition. Thomas Hitchcock's Oneechee. Third money went to Dolly's Love, owned by E. B. Schley and coupled with the winner as the Trainer O. T. Dubassoff entry.

The only accident of the race eliminated the Rokeby Stable's Good Chance and brought injuries to Jockey Harold Cruz, a Washington boy who took to the jumps this year. Cruz suffered a severe shoulder cut as well as bruises on his face and body. The Chance Shot gelding, winner of the Gov. Ogle Steeplechase here, was second when he stumbled, sending Cruz in front of flying hoofs at the sixth fence.

Pays Off at $4.70 Mutuel

Ossabaw, which quit in the Ogle, was the lightly regarded part of the winning entry but those who counted upon Dolly's Love cashed the $4.70 mutuel just the same. The route was 2½ miles and the winner was clocked in 4:41 2-5, one of the worst times of the event, but the track was not at its best.

The race, renewed this year after being taken off the program in 1939, was worth $4,600 to the winner, ridden by Jockey J. Penrod.

Former Jockey Whitey Abel saddled two winners on the card, both claimed from A. G. Vanderbilt. In the first race, he sent Unknown Land out to win at $6.10 and the daughter of Discovery paved the way for a $41.80 payoff in the daily double. Haste Back, owned by the Whitehall Plantation, put the finishing touches on the twin bet by winning the third race at a $10.40 mutuel.

Abel came back with his second winner in the fourth event. Skin Deep, capably handled by Jockey Henri Mora, withstood a long drive to take a photo victory from the favorite, King's Blue. Forgoso was third in the field of eight. Skin Deep paid $21.50.

Shipmate Beats Favorite

The best flat race offering of the day was a four-horse affair in which George D. Widener's Birch Rod, an odds-on favorite, was soundly trounced by A. C. Bostwick's Shipmate, a 3-year-old trained by Elizabeth C. Bosley. Third money went to Rex Flag.

Jockey Harry Richards, fined $100 for tossing off a victory on the same horse last week, rode Birch Rod and was loudly booed when he weighed in. However, Shipmate had too much speed today and, despite a hard ride, Birch Rod finished three lengths behind the $16.30 shot.

The only 3-year-olds in the Class C. Handicap, sixth on the card, finished in a thrilling nose battle. W. H. Lipscomb's Tedbriar took down the lens verdict sending Cherry Trifle into second money.

Hoya Students To Stage Big Pep Rally Tonight

Campus enthusiasm over the New York University game has hit a new high at Georgetown and a giant pep rally is scheduled for the quadrangle on the Hilltop tonight. Bonfires, band music, cheers and speeches by Joe McFadden and Lou Ghecas will be highlights of the occasion.

Grads and followers of the Hilltop eleven can never remember the entire school going wild over a game like the students have over the Saturday tilt with the Violets. N. Y. U. and Georgetown have always primed for each other and with the Hoyas unbeaten for three years and the Violets without a victory this season, the Hagertymen expect plenty of trouble.

Georgetown will be at full strength for the first time this season. The entire squad went through a long workout yesterday with concentration on pass defense. The New Yorkers have completed a great number of passes despite three defeats.

The deadline for reservations on Friday afternoon's special train close at 5 o'clock this afternoon. The local alumni chapter is offering a $12.60 all-expense excursion.

High Scores Mark First Day's Medal Play Rounds Over Congressional Course

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The topnotch women golfers of Washington and Baltimore inaugurated the first three-day medal play tournament ever held here in a high-scoring mood yesterday and as a result Mrs. Betty Meckley's 85 was the best first round score in the Peyne Trophy tournament at Congressional.

The weather was perfect, the course was in fine shape and the competitors were hardened from two months steady competition but the scores were way above expectations, and only six players in the starting field broke 90.

Course Longer

The course was stretched out a little longer than usual. A half-dozen of the women's tee markers were moved back to the front of the men's tees, but that was hardly an excuse for the high scoring. On five holes, not one player was able to match mens' par.

Mrs. Meckley enters the second round today with a three-stroke lead over Mrs. Lee Walper, Capital, and Mrs. Myron Davy, the sponsor of the tournament in honor of Mrs. Ralph Payne, from the host club. Three were deadlocked at 89, Mrs. Walter Stokes, who started 6-7 on the first nine and took another seven on ten, Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, the Mid-Atlantic medalist from Baltimore C. C. and Mrs. M. L. Bell, Terra Mariae, who had par for an 84 on the sixteenth tee when she finished 7-6-4 for the 89.

Scores jumped four strokes to the next best totals, 93s by Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith, the Woodmont Club champ, and Mrs. Jerome Sloman, the Middle Atlantic titlist, who among other things three-putted five greens.

Two Tie at 94

Mrs. Harold Price, Kenwood, came back in 43 to post a 94, while Mrs. Florence Godfrey, of the host club, matched that figure.

Mrs. L. G. Pray was off to a bad start as she played the out nine in 52 but she knocked nine strokes off coming in with a 43 and the 95 left her tied with Mrs. Harvey Cooper, Kenwood.

Several of the potential winners withdrew, including Mrs. E. Boyd Morrow, Elkridge, and Mrs. Bishop Hill and Mrs. Landra Platt, Chevy Chase.

Mrs. Meckley took the lead by playing the last three holes in 4, 4, 4, the best finishing performance of the day. Mrs. Davy was tied with the leader for 15 holes, despite poor putting, but finishing 5, 5, 5. Mrs. Walper had her trouble on the out nine, taking 47 blows, but she came back in 41. Mrs. Meckley was also back in 41, while the best out nine was Mrs. Bell's 43.

Mrs. Meckley's three-stroke lead places the Kenwood representative

Ithaca, Ann Arbor Gridiron Focal Points

Cornell-Ohio State, Michigan-Penn Games Hold Nation's Football Interest; Ivy Elevens Favored

By Paul B. Williamson

Focal points of the Nation's football interest this week-end will be at Ithaca, N. Y., where Ohio State plays Cornell, and at Ann Arbor, where the Michigan and Penn powerhouses collide.

In these, the biggest games of the week, the Williamson system is riding with Cornell and Penn, the Ivy League representatives, to defeat the Big Ten standard bearers. The ratings heavily favor Cornell, which is listed at 99.2, over Ohio State, with 91.7.

Penn has a slight margin over the Wolverines, 97.1 to 95.8. It's the difference between a well-balanced powerful squad and a team outstanding for its star backs, Tom Harmon and Forest Evashevski.

Fordham should have an easy time with St. Mary's, playing in New York, but this battle always is a bloody one. Others that should be decisive are Notre Dame over Illinois, Georgetown over N. Y. U., Nebraska over Missouri, Stanford over Southern California, Tennessee over Florida, Navy over Yale, Texas over Rice, and Ole Miss over Arkansas.

Watch Texas A. & M.

The system takes Columbia over Syracuse, Duquesne over Manhattan, Dartmouth over Harvard in a tough one, Oklahoma over Iowa State, Minnesota over Iowa, Northwestern over Indiana, and Washington over California.

Here's one to watch: Texas A. & M. over Baylor. The ratings indicate a rather easy victory for the Aggies, with 98.4 to 87.2 for the Baylor Bears. However, the game

Joe Medwick to Get General Check-up At Mayo Clinic

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 25.—Joe Medwick, Brooklyn Dodger outfield star, is going to the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., next month for a general check-up, the Dodgers announced today.

"There is nothing in particular wrong with Joe that we know of," said John McDonald, club secretary. "Joe merely asked permission to go along with Manager Leo Durocher who visits the clinic each year for a check-up on an ear trouble that has bothered him since childhood."

Before the National League season ended, the Dodgers ordered every player on the roster to undergo a thorough medical examination. It was reported at the time several men might be ordered to Rochester during the winter to have minor disorders corrected.

Fenelon Withdrawn From $10,000 Pimlico Special Next Month

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 23.—The Pimlico Special lost William Woodward's crack 3-year-old, Fenelon, today, but gained Myron Selznick's Can't Wait—a campaigner previously overlooked in bids to the Maryland Jockey Club's "horse of the year" race.

The jockey club said Movie Magnate Selznick had accepted an invitation for the 5-year-old Can't Wait to run in the Special November 1, while Woodward advised that the recently injured Fenelon was out of the race and out of training.

Thus the field looms as Can't Wait, W. L. Brann's Challedon and possibly Mrs. Payne Whitney's Hash and C. S. Howard's Mioland. Brann has indicated that Challedon—the 1939 winner—will run, but the club has not heard from Mrs. Whitney or Howard.

Although Can't Wait was not invited originally to the Special the club said he "fully merits the honor bestowed upon him." His recent victories in the Butler and Continental Handicaps earned him his bid—sent before Fenelon's withdrawal became known.

The special has been billed as a "triple-feature" race, with Challedon and Hash, 4-year-olds, running for supremacy in their division; Fenelon and Mioland, 3-year-olds, doing the same, and all trying for the "horse of the year" title.

With Fenelon out because of an injury suffered in the New York Handicap, the Special now shapes up as a championship contest among the older horses.

Rockne's Predecessor Says 1st Army Game Version Wrong

Jess Harper Tells How Dorais, Rockne Unveiled Pass in 1st Half

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, Oct. 23.—Jess Harper, the pipe-smoking cattleman who was both Knute Rockne's predecessor and successor at Notre Dame, says the legend about the first game with Army in 1913 is a bit wrong.

Fiction and hearsay have it the favored Cadets blanked the meager 17-man squad from Indiana in the first half and walked off the field for the rest with a 13-to-0 advantage.

During the intermission Rockne, captain of the Irish, and Gus Dorais, the quarterback (now coach at Detroit University) decided to try the little known forward pass as a last resort, present day accounts have it.

But that's all wrong, says Harper.

The cattleman, here for a noonday speech to a downtown quarterback's group, says Notre Dame tossed two passes that first half and led, 14 to 13.

During the final two periods Dorias heaved 15 of them and completed every one.

"Dorais is the greatest passer I believe I have ever seen. He was a wonderful judge of the speed of his pass receiver, throwing the ball so his man could take it on the dead run with never a slackening of speed or a change of pace," he said.

Harper, who was Walter Eckersall's substitute at the University of Chicago in 1905, demonstrated how Rockne first caught passes against his stomach but added that future ambassador of football later became more proficient and orthodox in his reception.

"Rockne really was a good end. He learned to start while out for track and despite his 165 pounds could handle a tackle well."

Harper told how he virtually wrecked his team's slight chances of beating the favored Army eleven by leaving in South Bend one of his star players whom he caught smoking.

"I think you did right," he quotes Capt. Rockne as saying when informed of the action.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Goldie Ahearn sucked the remnants of a corned beef on rye from between his teeth and allowed as how he was heppy again. "Like a fish out from water—a whale—I was when I am away from the box fight business. For five months I don't feel natchel. Like a cowboy wants this alfa-palfa, like Goering wants his gold medals, I gotta be around them fight muggs."

POVICH

From a fate worse than working for a living, Ahearn has been rescued by Ray Alvis, who incidentally blushed like a bashful lover when addressed as Mr. Alvis. The last time he heard a bell-hop page him as Mr. Alvis, he thought one of his upper-case relatives was in the house. Alvis is a very rugged citizen who has been bouncing around the fight business for 30 years without throwing a punch—or taking one. He is strictly a promoter who was never bothered much about where his next bankroll was coming from.

Recently, though, Alvis went out and lassooed himself a chunk of cash and in the same motion bagged the Riverside Arena in case he wanted to promote something. He is now the backer of Ahearn, who is long on pedigree as a matchmaker but short on cash to guarantee the fighters. Ahearn is swapping his contacts with fighters and fight managers for Alvis' cash and promotorial genius, and that is Washington's latest fight team.

"I want you should know, my fran'," quoth Ahearn, lapsing into the vernacular "dot for our foist show we have a sweethot from a match. A killer-diller from which I ain't responsible if it giffs modified moider. We will start off mit a bang like a bomb. You know from a bomb. We got dynamite for our foist show. Oi, the date—please be so kindly to mention it. October 28, dot's it."

Dynamite in what form was to be the first Ahearn-Alvis offering?

"Buddy Moore voisus Bill Boyd, that's who. I stole the match. New York wanted it. Chicago wanted it. Detroit wanted it. But I am getting it as a paisenal favor. Maxie Waxman what manages Boyd says he wants I should have the show for my starter so I am putting it in. We used to sell papers together and that makes from us great friends."

About Ahearn and Waxman, we knew (heck, he's got us talking that way), but who is Bill Boyd and, furthermore, who might this Buddy Moore be?

Ahearn simulated a faint. "Oi, who shouldn't know from Bill Boyd and Buddy Moore? Ebsolutely two of the greatest young heavyweights t'rowing leather. A couple of bums what don't waste no time boxing. They are fighters. I want you should know that Eddie Meade pays $5,000 for the contract from Buddy Moore and thinks it is a favor. A colored boy, you know. A better-looker than Joe Louis even. Confidentially, Louis is a automatical fighter. This Moore, he's natchel. He used to be a Golden Glover like Louis. To watch him fight it's a pleasure."

Okay, but who did Billy Boyd ever lick?

"I knew you would be esking from that, so I brought the list. Buck Everett, he knocked out. Henry Cooper, he knocked out. Bob Nestell, that California bum, he beat. In Pittsburgh he licked Young Bo-Bo, who was supposed to be another Joe Louis. From Boyd I am not worrying. He won't get hurted. I put him in here with Billy Nichi two years ago and it was a great fight."

We recalled dimly that one Buddy Walker stopped Boyd in eight rounds of recent date.

"Some people are always belittling. So Buddy Walker beat him, so what? It's the only fight Boyd loses in two years and that's all I am hearing—that Walker beat him. It ain't a real knockout to start with. He cuts Boyd's eye and they have to stop it. Anyway, and I'm telling you this confidentially, Buddy Walker is a great fighter."

Was there anything else?

"Sure, there's plenty. When I make a fight I have a reason, don't I? When two fighters fight, if they ain't mad at each other they gotta have a reason, don't they? Well, they got reasons. Buddy Moore what's gonna be a big-shot some day can't afford to lose to Boyd. On the other hend, Boyd belongs to Jack Dempsey. He wolships Dempsey. If he don't win he can't face Dempsey. He'll want to run away and hide. So that makes both of 'em wanting to win and that's what makes fights."

And the date is October 28?

"Please be so kindly as to remamber that, my fran'. We got a hot date. The Radskins are out of town and I am luring the Radskins when they are out of town on the day before my fight dates. We are putting down the prices to 44 cents for our bleacher seats. At that price, Momma and Poppa can come and bring the kids. For me it will be soch a plashure."

With CONSIDINE

New York, Oct. 23.—We've got a red-hot column about St. Mary's today. St. Mary's of Moraga, Calif., not St. Mary's of Texas. We cleaned up St. Mary's of Texas on Wednesday. Tomorrow we'll tell you all about St. Mary's of Orchard Lake, Mich., and the next day all about St. Mary's of Winona, Minn. Then Mount St. Mary's of Emmitsburg, Md.

CONSIDINE

We knew you'd want to know all about St. Mary's of California. They've had a new deal out there. The team represents the school now, instead of Slip Madigan. Another radical departure is that they're losing to California now. They have a new tub-thumper, too, Dinty Doyle, late of the radio page of the New York Journal-American. Mr. Doyle qualified for the press agent job by working all season for Billy Rose's Pacific Coast Aquacade, and the leap from the gals to the Gaels bridged no considerable chasm. True to tradition, Mr. Doyle is ensconced at the Waldorf, and is pouring, and the interesting data he has at his fingertips defies description. His immediate problem is trying to shake it off his fingertips.

Here's some hot-off-the-griddle information we picked up at one of Mr. Doyle's press seances yesterday:

Us—What's the new coach's name, Dinty?

Doyle—The new coach is—(remainder drowned out by following):

Bill Slocum—I didn't make that 1926 series. My paper was asking waivers on me at the time, so all I saw was the New York end of it. Tell me it was great fun in St. Louis.

Doyle—He's taught our boys a new system. It's called the marumpha-dungle—(rest obliterated by following):

Joe Williams—Fun! You never saw anything like it. That was George Weiss' first trip to a series, and you should have seen him put it on. Well . . . so we wind up in his room at the Jefferson Hotel one night, Pegler, Granny Rice and myself, and Granny remembers that he promised some All-American from 1882 to have breakfast with him. He had forgotten his name, but he kept looking through the phone book all night. He said he'd recognize the name if he came across it.

Doyle—Lemme tell you about this kid we've got at quarterback. His name is . . .

Mike Slocum—You know what I miss this year? I miss those twelfth men . . . You know, the guys who used to come down out of the stands and tackle a fellow who was running for a touchdown.

Doyle—I'd say our line averages about one hundred and umpty-fuff blmsk . . .

Unidentified Bystander—Some bum tried that on Harmon last year. Came closer to tackling him than anybody else did during the season.

Doyle—Our only shaky point is . . .

Jack Slocum (to Unidentified Bystander)—I didn't hear your story about the Englishman asking another one to play golf with him.

Unidentified Bystander (interrupting a pregnant statement by Doyle)—Well . . . picture a clubhouse scene. The typical old tweedy squire reading Spur. The younger man, looking for a game, comes up and he says, "I beg your pardon, sir, my name is Bilk." "Bilk? . . . Bilk?" the squire says, lowering Spur. "Which Bilks?" "Lancashire Bilks, sir." So the old squire looks at him and . . .

Doyle—The team arrives early on the morning of . . .

Unidentified Bystander—So after the squire asks him about his father he wants to know about his World War experience. The younger man said, "Grenadiers, sir. Major. Victoria Cross . . . haw, guess I was a bit lucky at that, sir." So the old squire stared at him for five more minutes and said, "Well, all right, I'll play you nine holes."

Williams—That's rich. What were you saying, Dinty?

Doyle—You mean I'm going to have silence? Well! The Gaels this season are one of the gre . . . (phone rings).

Gen. Slocum—It's for you, Dinty.

Doyle (glaring at phone)—Confound that Don Ameche for inventing this blasted thing.

G. W.'s First String Guards May Miss Mountaineer Game

Colonials Play West Virginia Under Lights

Kokoski, Agusiewicz Feared Out of Battle Tomorrow in Griffith Stadium; Latter Hurt

If it isn't one thing it's another in that George Washington University line, and now it looks as though Coach Bill Reinhart will be minus both first string guards for tomorrow night's game with West Virginia, at Griffith Stadium.

Johnny Kokoski, regular guard and one of the best defensive men, has not been heard from since last Thursday night, when he wired Coach Reinhart his father had died and he would be unable to make the Kentucky trip.

"Koko" was expected back Monday or Tuesday, but was still unheard from last night and it looks very much as if he will be out of the arc light clash with the Mountaineers. Even if he shows up today or tomorrow, he hardly will have time to get in shape for a good evening's work.

Henry Algusiewicz, who fills the other guard post, is still hobbling around on his injured ankle and is a doubtful starter against West Virginia and even if he gets in the game it will probably be for only a short time.

Stanley Ziobro and Ellis Hall filled the guard posts yesterday but it's not so much the fact that second stringers have to start as it is that the only replacements will be third and fourth stringers.

Mike Monchlovich will probably start at his usual center position as Tony Barauskas, the problem child of the line, was a new man in practice at his tackle post yesterday.

Ken Batson and Walter Fedora continued to carry the brunt of the ground attack in the latest workout while passing was still the stepchild of the G. W. offense.

Although the Mountaineers have shown improvement in each game, Coach Bill Kern is still displeased and reports from Morgantown have it that five sophomores will start against G. W. with a quintet of seniors relegated to the second string.

The visitors will arrive here at 5 o'clock this afternoon, 35 strong, and will be quartered at the Ambassador Hotel.

West Va. Wesleyan Frosh to Face Cardinals

West Virginia Wesleyan's freshmen football players, who were out of uniform last week against the State University, will comprise a portion of the starting lineup against Catholic University here Saturday, according to reports from Buckhannon, W. Va.

Tackle George Foehr and End Eddie Kosko, of the Bobcat Varsity, received lime burns in last week's game and they may not be able to start against C. U. Center Judson Hodges was burned and also twisted his leg. The freshman replacements are likely to hold their jobs for the remainder of the season.

A backfield shift was the only news of the C. U. workout here. Bill Griffin will leave his halfback post and will start at fullback. Shoved into the fullback position before due to injuries to other players, he has come through with commendable performances, including long runs against St. Anselm's and Miami and a pair of touchdowns against the Bobcats last year.

Capt. Hank Brostek reported for practice at Brookland stadium yesterday and although he did not take part in the workout he is expected to be ready for Saturday's game.

If C. U. has any worries at all concerning West Virginia Wesleyan they center around Eddie Meighan, the star thus far this year and a player who stood out last year against the Cardinals despite his team's 60-0 defeat.

Terps See Turning Point in Terror Game

Convinced that tomorrow night's game with Western Maryland will be the turning point in a so-far victoryless season, the University of Maryland grid squad smoothed its attack and pass defense in a long workout today, according to the Associated Press.

When the Terrapins take the field at Baltimore Stadium for their first night encounter it will be the fifth game of the schedule—the exact halfway mark in the campaign.

So far, the Terps have been edged in an upset by Hampden-Sydney, trounced by Pennsylvania and beaten, without any special trimmings, by Virginia and Florida.

But around the Terp camp they're saying that tomorrow night will be different. They expect no such demonstrations of power as came in the Penn, Virginia and Florida games.

They do expect, however, that Western Maryland will seek to take advantage of what appeared to be a Maryland weakness in the last two games—pass defense. And for that reason the Terps have concentrated all week on aerial defense, along with their own attack.

Officials said today the game would be packed with all the color customarily seen when traditional rivals clash. Virtually the entire student bodies of both schools will witness the game, and the Maryland rooting section will be augmented by the 65-piece student band.

The game will be for the second leg on a new Mayor Jackson Trophy. Maryland retired one in 1938 and started on its way toward another by winning, 12-0, last fall. Western Maryland's last win was by 12 to 0 in 1937.

In addition to the varsity, Maryland's jayvees and freshman gridders will be in action tomorrow, the former playing Penn jayvees here at 4 p. m. and the frosh traveling to Lexington, Va., for a tilt with Washington and Lee yearlings.

Then and Now in Life of 1902 Grid Star Turned Referee

Star of 1902 Battle Looks Back on 39 Years of Watching Top Schoolboy Rivalry

By Bill Burnett

His name appeared only in the last line of the box scores when Central and Tech High elevens renewed their rivalry for the thirty-eighth time a week ago, but Paul (Maggy) Magoffin was probably the most noteworthy individual on the field.

He was referee, of course, and in full charge of the 22 youngsters who battled to a scoreless tie in the city's outstanding scholastic rivalry. And he was probably the oldest man out there in action that night. But the item missed by newspapermen and fans alike was that Maggy knew the Tech-Central series—when.

He knew it when it was only a more or less impromptu get-together of poorly uniformed kids, for Maggy was the star of the first Tech-Central game. That was away back in 1902.

Maggy Now 57

Now Maggy is a hale and hearty citizen of about 57, still so wrapped up in the grid game that he runs several miles two or three times a week, in all sorts of weather, to be near it. Many observers call him the best referee in this section, a title he may deserve, in view of the demand for him at schoolboy and college games.

Caught at his downtown office yesterday, Magoffin had time to recall that first Tech-Central battle at the start of the century:

"It was a real tussle," he admitted, "but hardly more stiffly contested than this year's. Remember, the kids who played on opposite sides in the 1902 game had been teammates the year before. The year of that first game marks Tech's first season as a full-fledged District of Columbia high school, instead of an auxiliary of Central. All the boys knew each other, perhaps increasing the tension before the game.

"When we finally got together," Magoffin continued, "there was no telling who would win. Central finally took a 23-6 decision, however; so it has been trying for 39 years to prove it wasn't a fluke, and Tech has been trying to avenge the loss."

What Maggy forgot to mention was that, except for his own brilliant ball-carrying, Central might have lost that first clash. The records give him credit for scoring two touchdowns (they counted only 5 points apiece then) and kicking three extra points. He chalked up the first points of the game when he slithered around end and dashed 50 yards to score.

Further information on Magoffin's efforts in that initial engagement is furnished by R. W. (Jock) Snow, his running mate as halfback, now in the Interstate Commerce Department. Snow, incidentally, saw the family tradition carried on in 1938 and 1939 when his son Roddy turned up as one of the best blockers in Western High history.

"Guess Maggy played as good a game then as any youngster has ever played in local high schools since," Snow says. "He was the best of three great athletes on that team. As you know, he held every 220, 440 and 880 yard track record here for many years, besides playing extraordinary football. He was later captain of Michigan's powerhouse after a year at Marietta College.

"Then there was Chris Cox, our fullback." Snow was digging deep in his memory. "Chris later went to Cornell and was stroke of one of that school's best rowing teams. And Logan Cunningham, one of our ends, who played for Princeton and then became the Tiger coach."

1901 Team Best

Magoffin doesn't give the 1902 Central team much, despite the fact it won the interhigh series with ease after swamping Tech.

"Our greatest club was that of 1901," he says. "It was probably the toughest ever put together in a high school here. We beat Gallaudet twice, among other teams, and wound up the season by 'taking' Maryland."

Though he has watched each renewal of the Tech-Central rivalry, refereed many of them, Maggy seems not at all offended that folks have forgotten his connection with the series. As a matter of fact, he is something of a recluse, as far as football is concerned, showing up to officiate at games and then disappearing completely. Not even his many friends among officials know his home address.

Maybe Maggy, one of Washington's first football stars, is quite satisfied with being merely a name in the last line of the box score.

It's a Secret But Chicago Has a Team

Makeshift Eleven Has Won Two Games, All Under Cover

By International News Service

Chicago, Oct. 23.—They're still playing regulation football at the University of Chicago, although it's supposed to be a dark secret.

Not only that, but it developed tonight in a guarded statement by the university's sports statistician that if the makeshift squad holds to its present pace, it will finish with the best percentage record any Maroon team has compiled in the last 16 years.

The Maroons' last big year was in 1924 when Coach Amos Alonzo Stagg whipped them into shape to take the Big Ten championship. After that the team gradually fell upon evil days, suffering defeats even at the hands of the little colleges, until last December President Robert M. Hutchins finally took the team out of Big Ten football altogether.

But, apparently unbeknown to President Hutchins, a squad of about 30 players, die-hards who were members of the frosh or regular team last year, have been working out, and yesterday they marched to their second victory in three games, trampling Wilson Junior College of Chicago, 14 to 0.

It's all been so quiet and unofficial that President Hutchins told the Daily Maroon, campus newspaper, that he had no knowledge that these "scrimmages" were taking place.

C. P. Redick Makes Third Hole-in-One Shot

C. P. Redick, prominent golf official of the Federal Workers, made his third hole-in-one yesterday while playing in a fivesome over his home Capital Club course. The ace on the eleventh hole enabled Redick to post the lowest round of his career, a 74.

Pro Tony Sylvester, Red Thomas, S. S. Fletcher and C. Henry Cohen were watching when Redick's perfect five-iron shot rolled in the cup on the 165-yard eleventh hole.

His other aces were scored on the Ssannopin Club course in Pittsburgh, and East Potomac.

The Reader Says:

Best Teams on Coast

Sports Editor of the Post: This is the first letter I ever felt I should write to a sport's editor, but I read Shirley Povich's "Football Map of the United States," this morning and wonder why he did not mention the two best football teams on the Pacific Coast; University of Washington and University of Southern California; I mean, when the season is at an end.

Of course I know your ability to get out on the limb but I did not think you would overlook a University of Washington team that outplayed the best Minnesota team in years (though they pay off in score and not in ability) or was Povich in a hurry to finish that last paragraph? C. J. CASEY

Baltimore, Md.

COMMENT—Mr. Casey's "two best football teams on the Pacific Coast" may be Southern California and the University of Washington, but the records as of even date show that Stanford is the only Coast team unbeaten and untied. Southern California has twice been tied and even Mr. Casey admits that Washington was licked by Minnesota.

'Irish' Grad Answers

Sports Editor of The Post: Mr. Charles E. Planck, writng in "The Reader Says" department of today's (October 23) Washington Post, disparages the sportsmanship of Head Coach Elmer Layden of Notre Dame for permitting his football squad to run up such a large score (61 to 0) against Carnegie Tech last Saturday.

The Associated Press sports writer who covered the game inferentially praised Coach Layden's sportsmanship later by writing that Layden "Used every player on his bench in an honest effort to keep the score down." This should satisfy Mr. Planck or any other fair-minded person, but permit me to elaborate:

Knowing Elmer Layden personally, I admire him not only as an excellent football coach but also as an exemplary sportsman and gentleman. I honestly believe, paradoxical as this may seem, that no one regretted Carnegie Tech's inability to play its usual close game with Notre Dame more than did Layden. Aside from the fact that the overwhelming majority of football coaches are the best of sportsmen—and Layden is no exception—he had another very personal reason for not wanting to unnecessarily humiliate Carnegie. The Tartans have been respected and honored opponents of Notre Dame for many years.

In using all of his available players against Carnegie Tech, Layden did so to try to keep the score at a respectable level and at the same time to give his substitutes needed experience. Any other coach would have done practically the same. Coach George Munger of Pennsylvania used virtually all of his players recently in defeating Maryland, 51 to 0, as did Coach Jack Hagerty of Georgetown in trouncing Roanoke College, 66 to 0. All three coaches, Layden, Munger and Hagerty, saw their substitutes play surprisingly good football and capitalize on the numerous breaks that came their way.

The Notre Dame-Carnegie Tech contest was played at Notre Dame, which accounts for the fact that Layden could use 67 players—practically his whole varsity squad. Carnegie took 37 players to Notre Dame, 33 seeing action. Layden's first team played slightly more than one-third of the contest. The second, third, fourth, fifth, and sixth teams played the remainder, just as they bore the brunt of the play against Notre Dame's two earlier opponents, Georgia Tech and the College of the Pacific.

The unexpectedly high score that Notre Dame compiled against the Tartans is not to the discredit of the Carnegie players, who fought valiantly with their traditional courage. It is more to the credit of the Notre Dame players, their teamwork and all-around good playing.

Notre Dame, while proud of any football victory over Carnegie Tech—a consistently difficult opponent, regrets, I know, that this particular contest was not closer. It remembers with admiration and respect great Carnegie teams of other years, some of which defeated several of Notre Dame's best.

Yearling Classic Set In Griffith Stadium; Hoya Cubs Won in '39

The No. 1 freshman football attraction of the year here, Georgetown vs. George Washington, will be played this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at Griffith Stadium.

George Washington's record includes victories over Quantico Marines, 14-0, Dickinson Seminary, 13-0, and Maryland freshman, 37-6, in a practice game.

Georgetown swamped Temple frosh after losing the opener to one of the best Navy plebe teams in years, 13-12, and with only five days practice.

The Colonials and Hoyas will both be hard hit by graduation this year and many replacements will be expected from the present frosh squads for the 1941 varsities.

The Hoya cubs won last year.

Imposing Record To Go on Block Saturday; Running Stars Headlined

By the Associated Press

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 23.—An imposing intersectional record that had its origin in the days of Fielding H. (Hurry Up) Yost's point-a-minute teams will go on the block here Saturday when Michigan's Wolverines square off against Penn's undefeated Quakers.

The Wolverines, meeting the Quakers in a game which headlines the Nation's two leading scorers in all-America Tom Harmon and Francis V. Reagan, have found Eastern opponents very much to their liking—all, that is, except Penn.

Series All Square

When the football series with Penn was resumed in 1935 after an 18-year lapse, the Quakers were the only team to hold an edge over the Wolverines since the turn of the century ushered in the golden point-a-minute era of Yost and his teams at Ann Arbor.

Michigan won in 1935 and has taen the last three games from Penn, so the series now stands all square at eight victories each and two ties.

Harman and Company are eager to capture Saturday's contest from Penn to clear Michigan's intersectional slate as a "farewell present" to Yost, who retires as athletic director this year.

The Wolverines will carry into Saturday's clash a record of 14 victories and one defeat in competition with teams from the Atlantic seaboard since 1928. During that span Michigan has beaten Penn four times and lost only once, a 27-to-17 setback in 1936.

Wolverines Wilted

In the same period, Michigan defeated Harvard three times, Yale, Columbia and Princeton twice and Cornell once.

Perhaps the most famed game of the Penn-Michigan series—and one that Michigan would like to forget—was the 1912 battle in which the Wolverines scored three early touchdowns for a 21-0 lead, then wilted before an inspired Penn team to lose, 27 to 21.

All-America Roy Mercer filled in 1912 the spot that now is Reagan's. Michigan's great Jim Craig occupied the halfback berth that is now Harmon's.

They'll Pave Way for Penn, Michigan Backfield Stars Saturday

1. Little noticed by the spectator who gets his thrills from spectacular runs by backs are the linemen. Here's a quartet who rate All-America consideration. Above is Ray Frick, Pennsylvania's 6-foot-3 center and captain

2. Just a sophomore but already an All-America threat is Al Wistert, Michigan tackle, who'll be in there trying to open holes in the Penn line in Saturday's game at Ann Arbor

3. Ralph Fritz, Michigan guard, is coming at you here. Fritz is rated as one of the Wolverines' finest blockers and is in the same forward wall as Wistert

4. Penn's hopes will be pinned in part on this beefy character, Irving Mendelson, guard. He'll see plenty of action when Penn seeks to win over Michigan Saturday for the first time since 1936. The series stands at eight victories each and two ties being played at Waco well could be the biggest upset of the week.

Cornell-Ohio State Shares Spotlight With Michigan-Penn

Most difficult game to compute was Temple with a rating of 92.6 over Penn State with a rating of 88.1. If it hadn't been for Temple's 21-19 upset of Michigan State we would have taken Penn State without hesitation.

Really difficult picks among the big name teams are Georgia Tech over Auburn, where Tech will be lucky to repeat last year's 7-6 victory; Kansas State over Kansas in a knuckle and skull affair; Texas Tech over Marquette, close even if it is played at Milwaukee, and Michigan State over Santa Clara, with the Spartans bouncing back from defeat by Temple.

Tulane is the system's choice to beat North Carolina, even though the game is being played at Chapel Hill, N. C. Try that one on your fiddle.

We pick Princeton to be lucky if it shades Rutgers by a point after touchdown. By the same token Army will be fortunate if it gets by Lafayette. The statistics say Duke over Wake Forest, but the Deacons are still dangerous; Creighton over San Francisco and Detroit over Villanova.

Close ones will be Louisiana Normal over Centenary, Vanderbilt over L. S. U., Scranton over Marshall, Montana over Gonzaga, Oregon State over U. C. L. A., Denver over Utah, and "little Butler" over Washington of St. Louis.

(First team in listing is at home. Teams in CAPS are probable winners. Ratings are based on perfect of 100. (*) indicates night game.)

Ladies officers have been elected for next year and will be: Mrs. J. Arnold Anderson, chairman of the committee; Mrs. Clifford Scoggins, vice chairman, and Mrs. George A. Reichardt, secretary-treasurer. Appointments include: Mrs. Owsley Vose, club tournaments; Mrs. Russell W. Nichols, handicap and ringer; Mrs. M. F. Halliday, district tournament; Mrs. William J. Nickel, hospitality, and Mrs. Edward Widmayer, team captain.

Last competitive event on the men's schedule for the year will be the annual turkey tournament, November 2, 3, 9 and 10.

Filchock Out Of Hospital

Frank Filchock, the Redskins' No 2 passer, was released from Emergency Hospital yesterday, but at the same time it was announced that because of his arm injury he may not be able to aid Slingin' Sammy Baugh in the aerial attack on the Detroit Lions Sunday.

Simultaneously, it was stated that Ed Justice, veteran wingback who suffered a dislocated clavicle in September, will be out of action at least three more weeks.

Filchock, suffering a hemorrhage in the soft tissues of his right arm will not have to undergo an operation, Dr. Pete Moran, club physician stated, but there's only a bare possibility he'll be able to play against the Lions.

Clemson, Gamecocks, In 38th Game Today

Columbia, S. C., Oct. 23 (AP).—Two old gridiron foes, the Clemson College Tigers and the South Carolina Gamecocks, will renew their colorful rivalry here tomorrow for the thirty-eighth time, before an expected crowd of 23,000.

Game time is 2 p. m., Eastern standard time.

Ackerman On Fishing

Not long ago we mentioned an interesting colloquy on the effect of salt on linen lines, by Don McCarthy, executive secretary of the Miami Beach Rod and Reel Club. Since, we have had several requests for the care of silk lines that have been used in salt water.

There isn't much to be said for this usage, for silk lines aren't made to be so used. In their natural state a thorough washing after each trip would no doubt add materially to their life. Line dressing, or oil probably would add something to the life of silk line also, if it completely waterproofs it while in use, but if this line seems desirable above linen why not try using new line each season. We have found, that while there is a small loss of strength, it will usually go through without placing too much of a handicap upon the angler when he hits a big one.

Most anglers use silk line for marine angling because they seek to increase the efforts of small fish so that they simulate the fight of larger fishes. That means the rod must be light in weight and slightly soft in action also, or the value of lightness in the line is lost.

If an angler will go so far to increase his sport there isn't any reason why he shouldn't go all the way to get the maximum out of light tackle—which is cotton thread. For our bay and river fishing it is adequate because its breaking strength in pounds approximates the weight of the fishes usually found in these waters.

Some anglers, and they're real sportsmen, too, believe that tackle can be too light—that with the great ocean jumpers it kills them so that release is impossible. Both counts true, but not for small bottom fish, and even many striking fish, for they never leave their own element and for that reason not half drowned before being brought to boat.

We have asked Frank O'Brien, builder of Tycoon Tackle, to make a rod that we believe will supply the last little bit of action possible with small fish, if used with cotton thread or one of the Ashaway six or eight-pound test linen lines.

The idea is to keep the total weight down to less than 3 ounces by building the casting grip on the butt of the stick, and a reel seat just adequate to firmly hold one of the lightest tournament reels.

Five feet seems ideal for length, in spite of the belief that 6-foot is the length many cotton-threaders have already accepted as standard. Our reason for that—the additional length does not balance out so well. Rather, it leaves a feeling of tip-weight, even though the additional weight is infinitesimal. With no increase in size at the butt and slightly soft, the action in such a rod should be distributed so that it is where it should be—in the top two-thirds.

Want a Job? Bill Boyd's Your Party

Anybody want a job? Just drop up to 511 Eleventh Street Northwest today at 1 p. m., apply to a gentleman by name of Bill Boyd and he'll put you to work right away—but you'd better be good at ducking.

Bill's pulling into our town to complete his training for a 10-round fight Monday night at Riverside Stadium with Buddy Moore, and he is seeking sparring partners to help him along.

The former sailor protege of Jack Dempsey is willing to pay out the sum of $2 per round to any heavyweight in these parts who'll put on the gloves with him—in fact, the Riverside propaganda division is shouting it about that Bill is "challenging" local heavyweights to spar with him.

Be that as it may, Fearless Willie will arrive personally escorted by those two portly gendarmes of sport, Goldie Ahearn and Ray Alvis, and will be packed off for Baltimore immediately after his workout here in the Huron gymnasium.

Moore, Colored Heavyweight Eddie Mead has branded as a "second Joe Louis," has won five of his six pro fights by knockouts, his latest being a first-round chilling of Maynard Daniels.

Navy Departs for Yale Game

Middies Ease Up in Drills For the Elis

45 Players Make New Haven Trip; Tars Work Against Boola Boola Plays

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 23.—Navy gridders today tapered off in their preparations for the game against Yale in the bowl at New Haven on Saturday, and a drill in signals and formations will mark tomorrow's final workout on the home field before entraining for the jaunt.

The squad, consisting of 45 players, coaches and other attendants, will leave here tomorrow night on a special train over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, arriving in New Haven the following morning. The party will number approximately 75 in all, and will be under the direct charge of Commander Ward P. Davis, graduate manager of athletics.

Navy headquarters will be established in the Ray Tompkins House on the Yale campus. His majesty "Billy the Eighth," official goat mascot, will travel with the players, and will cavort along the sidelines of the Yale Bowl, in leash of Midshipmen "Frenchy" Durette and Jack Sweeny, official goat tenders. The players will engage in a two-hour final practice workout on the playing field Friday afternoon.

Jayvus Play Elis

Continuing their drive for the game, the Tars worked out again today in a dummy scrimmage against the junior varsity shock troops, equipped with Yale formations.

The Middies, otherwise in fine fettle for the game, face the possibility of being without the services of their triple threat back, Bill Busik, sophomore, who injured his knee in the game against Drake last Saturday. The hurt, however, appears to be responding to treatment, and according to Maj. Emery E. (Swede) Larson, head coach, Busik will be ready.

The final tapering off practice today was devoted entirely to drilling against Yale plays and formations as exploited by the shock troops of the junior varsity squad, and a deal of attention also was devoted to individual instruction to the various players, in body contact and other phases of work.

Plenty of Support

The Middies will not be without sufficient vocal encouragement at the game, as the second battalion of the regiment, comprising three companies, over 600 strong, will make the trip to New Haven, together with the academy band of 75 pieces, and the Midshipmen's Bugle Crops, cheer leaders and others. This party, numbering about 750, will leave here late Friday afternoon.

Navy Soccer Team Beats Lafayette, 3-1

Middies Score All 3 Goals in Final Quarter; Stirling Shines

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 23.—The Middie soccer team scored three goals in a fourth quarter rally to conquer Lafayette College, 3 to 1, today.

Trailing, 1 to 0, the Tars in the final period tied the count when Rollo Rieve, inside left, took Dick Lazenby's corner kick and headed it between the posts.

Midshipman "Silver" Stirling, sub for Williamson, then crashed through with 2 other Middie scores. He rushed Goalie Richard Ford, who fell with the ball inside the goal to break the deadlock.

Bockwinkle, Babe Zaharias Clash Tonight

Groan Artists Meet In Finish Battle At Turner's Arena

Warren Bockwinkle swings into his first headline wrestling role in several months, locally, tonight at Turner's Arena, meeting Babe Zaharias, the Greek villain. It will be a finish bout, and brings together two wrestlers fresh from impressive victories.

Bockwinkle, clean, scientific performer, will rely on his knowledge of wrestling holds to beat down the diminutive Coloradan, who usually goes about winning matches with his two fists.

Zaharias, brother of the more famous George who now manages Babe Didrikson, of Olympic and golf fame, defeated Danno O'Mahoney last week. Bockwinkle also upset O'Mahoney in a previous match.

Of particular interest will be the debut of Irish Pat Rooney, husky lad from San Francisco, who will meet Abie Stein, the New York Jewish wrestler, in a special 30-minute bout.

Paul Boesch, winner of seven straight local bouts, tangles with Tiger Tasker, a bearded grappler, in the semiwindup. Other bouts show Eddie Cook, Cedar Rapids (Iowa) star, against Jack Singer, Chicago, and Chris Zaharias against Tommy Rae, of Boston.

Morgan Near Colored Grid Leadership

Victory Over Lincoln Puts Team Over 100 Points for Season

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Oct. 23.—Undefeated, untied Morgan College, of Baltimore, with a surprise 31-7 decision over Lincoln (Pa.) University last week-end, challenged Prairie View (Tex.) Normal today for the national Negro football leadership.

The Baltimore team, by Saturday's scoring spree, became the first Negro college team to exceed 100 points for the season, piling up 104 against a single touchdown by the opposition.

With Prairie View idle for the week, other Negro football powers also surged forward, including Wilberforce, of Xenia, Ohio; North Carolina College, of Durham; Morris Brown, of Atlanta; J. C. Smith, of Charlotte, N. C., and Little Tougaloo and Alcorn Colleges, both of Mississippi. All have won three straight, and are undefeated and untied.

With contenders in four major and two minor conferences—ultimately to be ranked for the season by a single (Dickinson) rating system—the race continued to be dominated by Prairie View, regarded as the powerhouse of the Southwest loop. Morgan was rated a favorite to wind up in second place, with Morris Brown, Wilberforce and Kentucky State, of Frankfort, fighting it out for third.

Jackson (Special Delivery) Gilmore, Lane College's hard-running back, was effectively bottled up Saturday by Xavier in a 6-0 upset, but held his lead over the Nation's Negro scorers with 38 points collected on six touchdowns and two extra points. Morris Brown's Negro All-America fullback, John (Big Train) Moody, ranked second with 31 on four touchdowns, a field goal and four conversions.

While Prairie View held top spot in the Southwest Conference, a three-way tie engaged attention in the colored Intercollegiate Athletic Association with Morgan, North Carolina College, and J. C. Smith contenders. Morris Brown and Xavier, of New Orleans, shared the lead in the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, while the fourth major loop, the Midwestern Athletic Conference, found Wilberforce deadlocked with Lincoln University, of Jefferson City, Mo. Paine College of Augusta, topped the South Atlantic Conference, while Tougaloo and Alcorn fought for leadership in the South Central Athletic Conference.

Charlotte Hall Eleven Is Host To Anacostia

Charlotte Hall, Md., Oct. 23.—Minus the services of Frank Cady, its star fullback, and Walt Nechey, its ace end, the Charlotte Hall Military Academy football team will meet a combined varsity-"B" squad from Anacostia High School here tomorrow afternoon in the Cadets' fourth game of the season, the kickoff being set for 2:30.

Cady, the spearhead of the Charlotte Hall offense, was injured in scrimmage yesterday when he aggravated a shoulder injury sustained in the Georgetown Prep game two weeks ago. Rather than risk Cady to further injury, Coach Pop Ehringer will keep him out of uniform tomorrow, for Ehringer already has an eye set on the battle with Augusta Military Academy in Fort Defiance, Va., on November 2.

Arcaro Rides Colt To Victory in Duel With Early Delivery By Length and Half

By the Associated Press

Empire City Racetrack, N. Y., Oct. 23.—Coming within two-fifths of a second of Fighting Fox's track record for the short 6 furlongs distance, Samuel Backrach's Golden Voyage blazed to a length and a half triumph in the War Cloud (Class C) Handicap here today.

The Happy Argo colt, which had stopped in similar competition at Jamaica, surprised by flashing home in 1:07 4-5 and paying $20.80 for $2.

W. H. Berri's Early Delivery, coupled with Watch Over and favorite in the field of eight, saved the place by a half-length. The Tall Trees Stable's veteran Bill Farnsworth, was third.

Eddie Arcaro, who had figured in a dead heat in the second race, drove Golden Voyage to his scintillating victory.

Early Delivery and Golden Voyage hooked up in one of those dingdong duels that had the backers of each horse hoping his selection would not be first to crack under the strain. Bill Farnsworth always had the others headed. Even Don Meade, a master at keeping a tired horse going, could not make Early Delivery stick it out in the final furlong. Golden Voyage having more in reserve for the last straining strides.

Selections at Laurel

Dear Al:

I believe Galt Davis, owner of the Rosslyn Bowling Alleys, set some kind of record yesterday for getting advance information on the races. Before yesterday's program began, Davis displayed a bakery bill on the back of which was written Unknown Land and Haste Back. "Here's a coincidence," said Galt. "I was doing some work over at the alleys last month and the bread man came in and handed me this piece of paper these horses being hot tips. I stuck it in my pocket. This morning I was sending some clothes to the tailor's and I pulled the paper out of a pocket. For the first time I read the names of the horses. I wonder if a fellow shouldn't bet them in the double." By now we all know that Unknown Land and Haste Back won the double and paid $41.80. This piece would have a better twist to it if I was able to relate that Davis did not bet the pair. However, he did. With Fenelon out of the Pimlico Special and Hash a doubtful starter, the race has simmered down to Mioland and Challedon just as I said it would. But Pimlico turned me around by giving Can't Wait a belated invitation. That's all right but don't hold it against me. All of the boys are getting away with it but did you see Mora throwing his whip in the face of King's Blue in that stretch drive? He was really doing a lot of riding. Jockeys Carroll Bierman and F. A. Smith were tied for the lead in the riders' race here, each having won 14 times, going into yesterday's card. Apprentice John Mearle who has been out of action since Saturday, will resume riding Saturday. Mearle has a bad shoulder due to a spill in New England. Among the arrivals at Pimlico was the Woodvale Stable, with the Belmont Futurity winner, Our Boots. Wayne D. Wright has been engaged to ride Breckinridge Long's Nasca in the Selima Stakes Saturday. Track Superintendent Richard Pending, of Bowie, reports more than 2,000 stall applications for the session which opens November 16. Trainer Sammy Hicks announced that he would campaign a string of five horses belonging to D. J. Sullivan during the Charles Town meeting. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—Tempest, in his lone start in New York, was sent postward a 7-to-5 favorite, but faltered in the final stages. With the benefit of education received in that heat, he receives top figure. Parfait Armour is an outsider with an excellent chance. Buckle Up won his last race.

Second race—Forest Charm was winging out in front of a field of similar quality when he fell at the fourteenth fence. A like effort should see him home in front here. Leucite Junior was bet on in his recent race, but showed little. Judges Bid has been knocking close.

Third race—Pompier, when competing against the principal contenders in this race, was off slowly and closed with a rush. If he can improve his early foot he may get up. Marandan finished in front of the top horse last start and is the one to fear. Coquelicot is a dangerous factor.

Fourth race—Royal Marlboro won his last race and has raced well against top line juveniles. He appears well placed today. Barrymore beat high grade platers in fast time last out and may be close. Light of Morn will go well if the track is off.

Fifth race—Dr. Whinny was right behind Jay Jay, Pictor and Roman in the Capital Cap and has shown a marked liking for this strip. Liberty Flight won a handicap in New England in fast time and rates as the principal threat. Abrasion for the show.

Sixth race—Raise Up won his last heat over this track and then went to New York to run second to Little Risk in the Correction Handicap. She figures much the best. Red Whack has been knocking close in high grade company and figures next in line. Jeanne D'Arc to beat the others.

Seventh race—Sun Phantom is fresh from a sparkling effort at Keeneland and showed good form at Havre. Meeting cheaper opposition than usual today, he rates the call. Crius was a good second recently and should hold the others safe. Pollenator may go well.

Eighth race—Flying Centaur beat most of the contenders here when he registered over a field of Maryland-breds last week. He should repeat. Clapair won his last, but bowed to Flying Centaur in a previous effort. Challante has the speed to become a serious contender.

Best bet—Raise Up.

Frank Replies To Connely on I. B. A. Charges

Rupture With SEC Believed Widened By Interchange

Jerome N. Frank, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, has issued a formal statement denying that he had inferred in any way whatever that the Investment Bankers Association "is engaged in a concerted effort to 'gut' the Securities Act."

Mr. Frank's statement was issued in answer to charges made by Emmet F. Connely, president of the Investment Bankers Association, that Mr. Frank in a recent address before the American Institute of Accountants at Memphis, had "deliberately misrepresented" the position of the I. B. A. Mr. Connely's statement was made Monday at San Francisco, where he attended a meeting of the California section of the I. B. A.

Relations between the SEC and the I. B. A. were believed to have improved prior to Mr. Frank's address at Memphis and Mr. Connely's remarks at San Francisco. However, it is believed the rift between the agency and the I. B. A. has now widened.

$100,000,000 Housing Issue Slated Today

Short-Term Treasury Offering to Bear 0.25% Interest

By the Associated Press

Secretary Morgenthau announced yesterday that the Treasury would offer today $100,000,000 of one-year notes on behalf of the United States Housing Authority.

The notes, to be offered through Federal Reserve Banks, will be dated November 1, 1940, and will bear interest at the rate of one-fourth of 1 per cent. They will not be subject to call prior to maturity on November 1, 1941.

The notes will be fully guaranteed by the United States and will be tax exempt.

Morgenthau said that if plans of the USHA materialized, it was expected that private capital would furnish local housing authorities with permanent financing covering the whole cost of their projects. In that case, he added, the USHA might not need the new funds for more than the one year and the notes would be paid off in cash at maturity.

Administration 'Drives for Power,' Charges Moley

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—Raymond Moley, former adviser to the New Deal, said tonight that the Administration's "drive for power" could be described in four words: "Must," "pack," "purge" and "perpetuate."

At a "no-third-term-day" rally in Manhattan Center—the "key" rally of many throughout the country—Moley asserted that virtually all of the social reforms of the New Deal were enacted during the first term.

"The second term was marked by a continuous effort to increase executive authority," he said. "Two terms—the first was for the people, the second was for power."

Four examples, he said, described "the pattern of that drive for power."

"First the order of the day was 'must,'" he said. "We all remember those 'must' bills. The second command was 'pack.' You remember that attack upon the Supreme Court. The third was an order to the people. They were told to 'purge' members of Congress. And now we are commanded to 'perpetuate.'"

Dorothy Thompson Explains Stand

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—Miss Dorothy Thompson, newspaper columnist, said tonight, "I am going to vote for Roosevelt because I don't believe in taking the quarterback out of the game at this minute."

In a question and answer program broadcast under auspices of the Independent Committee for Roosevelt and Wallace, Miss Thompson said, "I not only have nothing against Wendell Willkie, but I would like to see him in the Cabinet. I like him very much."

"But since we are speaking openly," she added, "there are lots of people behind Wendell Willkie that I don't like one little bit. And I have my doubts whether he could get them off his neck if he were elected."

Steel, Copper and Rubber Issues Lead Broad Stock Rise; Grains, Cotton Spurt

New York, Oct. 23.—Steel, copper and rubber shares formed the vanguard of a broad stock market advance today, extending the lift which appeared in the previous session. The Associated Press average of 60 selected stocks gained .3 of a point at 44.8. The volume of transactions was the highest in three weeks, totaling 807,040 shares, compared with 535,730 yesterday.

As has been usual in recent sessions, celerity in trading only appeared on the upswing. When prices wavered from time to time during the day under the impact of profit-taking, the moments of sell-off were short and transactions narrow.

In the absence of any outstanding foreign or domestic news with outstanding market value, analysts were forced to ascribe the general rise to adjustment of holdings by traders. However, a small amount of "outside" business was reported by brokerage houses.

Supporting the advance in shares was a similar rise in bonds and an unusually strong commodities market, featured by a rise of 40 to 50 cents a bale in cotton and, at Chicago, in gains of ⅜ to ⅞ cent a bushel in wheat and ⅞ cent to 1⅜ cents in corn. In this category, hides proved an exception, slumping as much as .42 of a cent a pound at the close after showing firm gains all through the day. The drop resulted from profit-taking which touched off a series of stop-loss orders.

The most active risers among the shares included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown, Wheeling Steel, Chrysler, Goodyear, U. S. Rubber, Anaconda, Kennecott, American Smelting, Phelps Dodge, Douglas, United Aircraft, U. S. Gypsum, Johns-Manville, Air Reduction, Western Union, Santa Fe, Great Northern preferred and Standard Oil of New Jersey.

In the curb, where 115,000 shares were traded compared with 87,000 yesterday, advances of a point or more were recorded for Jones & Laughlin Steel, Ford Motor of Canada "B," Singer Manufacturing, Pepperell and Sherwin Williams.

What with Arthur Godfrey, WJSV's "Sun Dial" impresario, The Post, Washington's Aero Club and Columbus University jointly sponsoring a contest whereby five local persons will be given free courses in aviation, it might be interesting for all the persons who've entered it to listen to "Vox Pop" over WJSV at 7:30 tonight.
Vox Poppers Parks Johnson and Wally Butterworth from Floyd Bennett in New York are to interview officers, instructors, students and crew members of the naval service taking part in the Navy's Reserve Aviation program and get them to tell you just how they feel about the thing.
One of the speakers is to be Lieut. Comdr. Don F. Smith, commanding officer of the Naval Reserve Aviation Base at the field and one of the leading bomber pilots of the Navy.
The Washington contest, sponsored by the five eminent institutions mentioned above, is open to all men and women between the ages of 18 and 40 who are residents of Washington, Alexandria, Montgomery or Prince Georges Counties and who have not attended aviation ground school. Five questions about elementary aviation principles are asked every morning by The Post and by Godfrey on his "Sun Dial" program. From the answers submitted to The Post, the Aero Club is to choose the five most likely flyers. The contest closes November 7.

2 p. m., WMAL—"Saving Democracy for the Western World" occupies the closing hours of the Herald-Tribune Forum. Dorothy Thompson, Angus MacDonald, minister of the Canadian navy, and Richard Casey, Australian Minister to the United States, are the principal speakers.

3:15, WJSV—Kathleen Norris continues her afternoon series for the Associated Willkie Clubs.
4:15, WMAL—The final session of the Herald-Tribune Forum is addressed by the President, who will be introduced at 4:45 by Mrs. Ogden Reid. Before the Chief Executive speaks there will be addresses by Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese Ambassador to the United States, and Mrs. William Brown Meloney, founder of the forums. 10:15, WOL—Although 136 Mutual stations will hear a dicussion of the current newsreel collection, "A World in Flames," listeners in Pennsylvania will not, for the Board of Censors of that State recently banned the Cabinet-praised film for "moral" reasons.

U. S. Worker Can Carry Family To Poll Without Breaking Law

By Edward Ryan

The Hatch Act is not going to be allowed to break up any happy American families on election day if the Civil Service Commission can help it.

One of the things Government employes and others covered by the Hatch law must avoid is "transporting voters to or from the polls." By the definitions which came into the Hatch bans by way of the older Civil Service political rules, the practice of transporting voters or getting out the vote is listed under the heading of "offensive activity at elections."

The Government employe, however, won't be offensive, or a Hatch Act violator, if he drives his wife down to the ballot box on November 5, according to the informal opinion of Hatch Act enforcement chiefs in the Civil Service Commission.

He won't be prosecuted either if he takes voting members of his immediate family along on the ride, these officials said. And if he has a good neighbor, with whom he has been in the habit of exchanging favors, the chances are he could offer a free ride to the polls without being accused of playing dirty politics.

Main reasons for permitting husbands or wives who come under the Hatch Act rules to transport members of their own families to the polls is that there is a "community of interest," nonpolitical interest, between the individuals, officials explained. Where the transportation rule applies, they said, is in cases where the real intent is to "get out the vote on election day."

In other types of political operation, however, it was pointed out, "community interest" between married couples is no insurance at all against being prosecuted for Hatch Act violation. For example, the civil service political rules, which were made a part of the Hatch Act by its authors, said in part:

"Any political activity which is prohibited in the case of an employe acting independently is also prohibited in the case of an employe acting in open or secret cooperation with others. . . . Employes are therefore accountable for political activity by persons other than themselves, including wives or husbands, if, in fact, the employes are thus accomplishing by collusion and indirection what they may not lawfully do directly and openly.

"This does not mean that an employe's husband or wife may not engage in politics independently, upon his or her own initiative, and in his or her own behalf. Cases have arisen, however, in which the facts showed that the real purpose of a wife's activity was to accomplish a political act prohibited to her husband, the attempt being made for her husband's benefit, and at his instigation or even upon his coercion.

"This may be true of individuals or it may occur among groups of employes' wives, associated for the purpose of securing for their husbands what their husbands may not secure for themselves.

"In such situations it is obvious that the prohibitions against political activity are being indirectly violated. The collusion or coercion renders the wife's activity imputable to the husband, he being guilty of the same infraction as if he were openly a participant."

By the terms of the two Hatch Acts and the Civil Service rules added together, the penalty for mixing marriage and forbidden politics, as for any other Hatch Act violations, is removal from the service.

The rolls of Government employes working in the District mounted to 142,821 in August, the seventh new all-time peak in as many months, the Civil Service Commission reported yesterday. Salaries for these workers totaled $24,881,086, also a new record. National employment and pay roll figures for the executive agencies also hit a new high—a total of 1,038,229 employes with a $134,336,929 pay roll for the month. The District's largest employment gains were in the War and Navy and Commerce Departments and the Federal Security Agency.

Not that the prospect of military service has anyone worried—but these are some of the ways that practical jokers have been capitalizing on selective service in some Government offices:

Must usual stunt is a telephone call to a young, registered employe, to say that his local draft board is calling and wants him to report there right away.

A variation is reported to have been used by a young lady who wanted to make sure her favorite boy friend would not spend the evening out with another young lady. She had a friend call to tell the young man that his local draft board might need him at any moment, and ask him to stand by his telephone until morning.

Selective service officials pointed out that the local boards in Washington aren't likely to be phoning anyone to come in for military service, at least until they have sent out the questionnaires.

Federal Security Administrator McNutt yesterday took under advisement the plea of UFWA unions and other groups that Harry McAlpin, discharged employe of the District Employment Center, be reinstated, officials said.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

A. F. L. Picket Slain, 4 Wounded And 30 Beaten in Labor Battle

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Oct. 23.—One man was shot to death, 4 suffered minor wounds and 30 others were beaten today in a pitched battle between non-union and union construction workers at Velda Village Hills, St. Louis County subdivision.

Upton Hammond, found unconscious from multiple wounds and a skull fracture, died at St. Louis County Hospital.

He was a member of an American Federation of Labor picket line of 50 men, who were routed by a force of about 200 non-union employes of a building and real estate company.

Children Endangered

About 15 shots were fired, rocks were thrown and clubs and wrenches were brought into play in the battle.

Children walking to school at the time the shooting began ran into backyards and none was hurt.

A brief skirmish preceded the main fight. Reinforcements were summonded from another of the company's building projects, and a shouting crowd advanced on the picket line.

Brushing aside several deputy sheriffs, the attackers rushed the pickets, pounding on automobile tops, smashing windows and hurling rocks as they went forward. About 15 automobiles belonging to the A. F. L. men were battered.

A. F. L. Men Outnumbered

The shots were fired in the battle that followed. The AFL men, heavily outnumbered, were forced to retreat, leaving Hammond, bleeding from the chest and the head, lying on the groun. At his side was his "Unfair to Organized Labor" sign.

Calls for aid brought police and additional deputies to the scene, but the fighting was all over by the time they arrived.

George W. Davis, business agent of the AFL Building Laborers' Union, Local 110, said the picketing was part of a county-wide campaign to organize construction workers.
